Canadian 'abandoned' in embassy pullout

NELSON, B.C. (CP) — A Montreal man working for a firm which did business in Iran says he was abandoned by the Canadian government when it closed its embassy and smuggled six U.S. diplomats out of the country last month.

Doug Browning, who has been working in Iran since 1973 for the firm of Stadler Hurter, said in Tehran Thursday he is a "diplomatic hostage."

"I'm very angry," he said in a telephone interview with the Nelson Daily News. "I'm angry with the (Canadian) embassy. They phoned me a half hour before the embassy people left for the airport.

"The first week I nearly had a breakdown. I didn't know how they (the Iranians) would react to the embassy closing. Because I'm a little nobody and I'm not big publicity . . . I don't understand how they can leave me here stranded and take six Americans out."

Browning said he stayed behind in Iran when other company employees left late in 1979 after the Canadian government said it could no longer guarantee the safety of Canadians.

Browning was to organize the shipping of the other employees' personal goods back to Canada. The company had a $250 million contract with an Iranian government corporation to build sawmills, plywood plants, pulp mills and to do other forestry work near the Caspian sea.

Since that time, Browning said, he has not been given an exit visa, although he said his life is not in any danger.

"I'm not free to come home to Canada," he said. "I've been a hostage for six months, but a hostage with the freedom to travel around Iran."

Stadler Hurter went bankrupt after leaving Iran. The name and assets have been bought by a German firm which says it has been unable to get Browning out of the country.

Browning said he was in constant contact with the Canadian embassy for six months. Embassy officials were unable to persuade the Iranians to let him go, he said.

Browning said that although the firm went bankrupt, it did not inform Iranian officials, who continued to consider him a company representative and wanted him to remain. In addition, "there is a tax problem which is very involved."

He said that finally, the president of Iran's industrial development corporation "had written to police to say that he had no objection now to me leaving Iran."

"The morning I was picking up the letter was the morning the story broke in the local papers about what the Canadians—'the terrible Canadians,' as they say—did.

"I went to the office and they said 'We're sorry, but we have to withdraw that letter and from now on your're considered political.' Being political they

Ottawa boots another Soviet diplomat

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is expelling another Soviet official in retaliation for the expulsion of Col. Harold Gold, a Canadian military attache, from Moscow, the external affairs department announced Thursday.

The department said in a statement the government has reduced the Soviet embassy's commercial section by one person. That means V.F. Trofimov, a member of that section, will be forced to leave in two weeks, the statement said.

Retaliation promised

This is the latest move in a series of expulsions beginning with the government's decision Jan. 21 to kick out three Soviet embassy officials for spying.

Moscow responded by ordering out Gold last week. Gold, who returned to Ottawa Wednesday, said Soviet charges he was spying are absurd.

External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald has been promising retaliation for some days.

The external affairs department said the expulsion of Trofimov "should not be construed as indicating that Mr. Trofimov was engaged in activities incompatible with his status in this country."

"The measures have been adopted solely in retaliation for the unwarranted expulsion of Col. Gold," the department said.

The statement said MacDonald warned the Soviet Union that Canada would retaliate if Russia expelled any Canadian diplomat for spying because Canadian diplomats in Moscow are not engaged in espionage.

Gold's activities "were fully in accord with his position as Canadian defence attache in Moscow."

"Therefore the Canadian government regards his expulsion as completely unjustified," the department said.

The latest move reduces the authorized number of Soviet diplomats in Canada to 63. The actual number of Soviet officials in this country is 60 because Moscow has not yet replaced the three military officers kicked out Jan. 21 for spying.

Canadian diplomats in Moscow now total 38.

The Conservative government has been lambasting the Soviet Union during the Feb. 18 election campaign, particularly since the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. But MacDonald declared Jan. 21 the decision to expel the three Soviet military officers for spying was not linked to the Afghanistan crisis.

Clark savors Trudeau oil slip

THE WINTER CAMPAIGN

OTTAWA (CP) — Pierre Trudeau has stirred up more confusion about how much oil prices would rise under a Liberal government with a statement his aides wrote off Thursday as a slip of the tongue.

The Liberal leader said in a television interview Wednesday that the increase would be less than $3 a barrel if he is elected prime minister Feb. 18.

But aides travelling with Trudeau, after initially denying the statement, scrambled to listen to the tape and come up with an explanation.

"It was a slip," said Patrick Gossage, Trudeau's press spokesman in Prince George, B.C. "We haven't changed our position."

Gossage explained the slip this way:

The Conservatives have proposed a $4-a-barrel increase for domestic oil this year. But the price went up $1 on Jan. 1, leaving $3 to go.

That was the $3 to which Trudeau referred when he said an increase under a Liberal government would be less than $3 a barrel this year, said Gossage, saying the party is still committed to a total increase of less than $4 this year.

In Thunder Bay, Ont., Prime Minister Clark lashed out at the apparent confusion over the Liberals' statements on oil prices.

He told a campaign rally of about 500 that the Liberals had no less than four official spokesmen on energy matters. Each Liberal, he said, had a different figure for how much oil would increase this year.

"No wonder they can't explain their energy policies to Canadians," Clark said. "They can't explain it to themselves."

Trudeau, who has hedged on giving specific figures, made the statement after repeated demands to name a price during a CFTO-TV interview taped last week and broadcast Wednesday night.

Hopeful U.S. shelving Iran squeeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, encouraged by signs that Iran's new government is anxious to end the American hostage crisis, announced Thursday it would not formally impose long-promised economic sanctions against that country.

State department spokesman Hodding Carter explained the policy reversal by saying that the U.S. administration did not want to take this step while diplomatic activity continued.

He did not elaborate. However, reports have circulated in recent days indicating that Iran would be willing to release the 50 American hostages held by Moslem militants at the U.S. embassy in Tehran in exchange for the establishment of a UN-sponsored international tribunal to investigate alleged crimes of the deposed shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Carter to urge listing women on draft rolls

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will call for the registration of women for the military draft, White House officials said Thursday.

The White House scheduled an announcement for today detailing the president's plans for the entire draft registration program.

Officials who asked not to be identified said Carter decided to include women in the program despite a warning from Speaker Thomas O'Neill of the House of Representatives that the measure would not pass the Congress.

The president probably will limit registration to persons 19 and 20.

Carter announced plans last month in his State of the Union messsage to resume draft registration, citing an increasing military threat from the Soviet Union.

Although he has been silent on the question of whether he would include women, he had previously taken the position that any such program should include women.

There are about 150,000 women in the American military, out of a force of more than two million. However, women are banned by law from combat.

Japanese curb trade credits for Russians

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan decided Thursday to stop giving new trade credits to the Soviet Union in retalitation for the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, government sources said.

Financial sources estimated that the move means a freeze of about $1.4 billion in government credits originally earmarked for two-way trade and Soviet development projects.

The decision came after a meeting Thursday between Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira and senior officials of the foreign, international trade and industry and finance ministries, government officials said.

"It can't be helped if the measure will affect Japanese-Soviet trade," a senior Foreign Ministry official told reporters.

Most of the two-way trade between Japan and the Soviet Union is financed by credits extended by the government's Export-Import Bank.

Foreign ministry sources said Foreign Minister Saburo Okita will brief U.S. ambassador Mike Mansfield today.

The government has also decided to boycott the Moscow Olympic games as a means to "express displeasure" over the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

More rioting rips Oakalla

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 120 prisoners smashed windows, furniture and water pipes overnight in a demonstration in the west wing of Oakalla prison in Burnaby.

Prison security official Lloyd Linn said the prisoners returned to their cells Thursday morning after meeting with a Vancouver lawyer.

Linn said the prisoners were upset about disciplinary measures and lack of leisure time. He said it is not known if charges will be laid against the prisoners.

Linn said several prisoners were cut by glass when windows were broken.

Armed guards stood watch outside the minimum-security institution during the disturbance. The disturbance was similar to one that ended Wednesday when guards turned a fire hose on 28 prisoners who had wrecked furniture in the south wing.

Barry Sadler, of the B.C. Corrections Service, said the prison administration had agreed to bolster the prison's legal library, to provide more flexibility in recreation and to loosen clothing regulations.

He said warden Henry Bjarnson had agreed to give more consideration to allowing an independent presence on the prison's internal discipline board that punishes infractions by prisoners.

"The only major issue of contention left is the visiting situation," Sadler said. "As I understand it, the inmates feel there should be less security and supervision during visits."

Poll nudges queen to abdicate

LONDON (Reuter) — Most Britons believe Queen Elizabeth should abdicate within the decade and allow Prince Charles to become king, an opinion poll published Thursday says.

Seven out of every 10 people asked by the newsmagazine Now said the queen eventually should stand down. Many were in favor of her abdicating in 1986 when she will be aged 60.

Only one person in 10 believed the queen, crowned in 1953, should abdicate immediately.

Five months ago, a national poll showed that 40 per cent of the population believed the queen should give up her throne.

The change in public opinion is apparently due to the growing popularity of 31-year-old Prince Charles. He was the most popular member of the royal family with 70 per cent of the votes.

The poll showed that most Britons are fiercely loyal to the monarch.

Swiss charge UBC professor

VANCOUVER (CP) — University of British Columbia professor Cyril Belshaw has been charged in Switzerland with the murder of his wife, Vancouver lawyer Harry McLaughlin said Thursday.

McLaughlin said his client also was charged with fraud.

The well-known anthropology professor was extradited by French authorities to Switzerland late last week. McLaughlin said under Swiss law an extradited person must be charged formally or be released.

Betty Belshaw's nude, decomposed body was found wrapped in plastic bags beside a road in Switzerland last March.

The couple had been living in Switzerland when Mrs. Belshaw, 59, disappeared in early February.

McLaughlin said the investigation into the death was continuing. The process is different from Canada where the crown normally would complete its investigation before laying charges.

Under Swiss law, the chief examining magistrate is required to report to a Swiss tribunal every two weeks to justify keeping Belshaw in jail.

Belshaw has been under arrest in France since November when Paris police stopped him as he stepped off plane to attend an academic conference.

Belshaw is a former chairman of the UBC anthropology department and editor-in-chief of Current Anthropology, an international journal.

Nine months later, voter lists swollen

By DON COLLINS
Colonist reporter

THE WINTER CAMPAIGN

Two federal elections separated by the length of a pregnancy have seen a bit of a population explosion on the local front.

Voters' lists in the side-by-side federal ridings of Victoria and Esquimalt-Saanich have added a combined total of 8,103 names for the Feb. 18 election.

Esquimalt-Saanich has seen the biggest increase. There were 69,582 voters eligible for the May 22 election. There will be 74,051 this time—a difference of 4,469.

In Victoria the figure has jumped by 3,634 from 66,308 to 69,942.

In the other area riding, Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands, where the growing Western Community is expected to add to the total that stood less than nine months ago, final figures aren't likely to be available before Monday.

Esquimalt-Saanich actually came up with 6,639 new names, but lost another 2,170 through deletions. Riding returning officer Malcolm Anderson said the deletions are attributed mainly to voters moving out of the riding or dying.

All of this is occurring in advance of an election that is being carried out without the customary enumeration.

When the government fell in December and the country was faced with an unexpected election, a decision was made to work from last May's voters' lists. The belief was that the severity of winter in most parts of Canada would prevent a proper enumeration in the time allotted.

In the absence of an enumeration, revision officers have been hard at work in the various ridings adding names to the list. But there have been snags, according to some party campaign workers in Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands.

The workers say they fear a lot of would-be-voters will be left off the list.

"A lot of names turned in by our canvassers haven't been added because the revision agents weren't able to make contact with the people when they tried," a campaign aide of NDP candidate Jim Manly said Thursday.

"There's probably going to be a lot of suprised people on election day who are going to turn up to vote only to find they aren't eligible," she said. "They probably think they are on the list."

Returning officers in the other two ridings didn't expect to encounter the same problem.

Anderson said canvassers in Esquimalt-Saanich weren't encouraged to gather names in this fashion. In Victoria, returning officer Eleanor Allan said she made sure that revision officers contacted everyone whose name had been turned in as an addition to the existing list.

Policeman, BCTV settle out of court

VANCOUVER (CP) — An out-of-court settlement for $20,000 has been reached between a city police inspector and British Columbia Television.

Inspector Vic Lake confirmed the settlement Thursday, but would not name the amount. Lake's lawyer, Cecil Branson, said later the settlement was for $20,000.

The suit involved a news story in September, 1978, about the Penthouse Cabaret.

Cabaret owner Joe Phillipone made statements about the city vice squad's investigation of his club during an off-camera interview with a BCTV reporter.

Lake, who headed the vice squad at the time, indicated he was thinking of suing Phillipone.

BCTV then aired an interview with Lake, and included Phillipone's comments.

Vernon's next stop for freed dissident

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 22-year struggle by Soviet dissident Vasili Gorelkin to reach Canada ended Thursday as he and his family arrived from Vienna where they had spent six weeks in a Jewish resettlement camp.

"It's like coming out of prison," the 50-year-old construction engineer said upon his arrival with his wife Nina, 45, their 10 children, and two grandparents.

The Gorelkins said through an interpreter they suffered discrimination and often physical abuse and intimidation because they sought to practise their Pentecostal religion.

The family left immediately for the Okanagan community of Vernon in the company of Gorelkin's niece Anna Kolesnichenko.

Gorelkin is an acquaintance of prominent Soviet dissident Alexander Sakharov and, as a member of the Committee for the Defence of Christians, was regularly in touch with civil rights activists outside the Soviet Union.

Soviet authorities issued the family Israeli exit visas to hasten the emigration process.

Son Simeon, 21, said he was still shocked by his new freedom.

"We can praise God, go to church and share our opinions with others."

Two former Liberal cabinet ministers apparently were oblivious to the hubbub over Trudeau's slip as they campaigned Thursday and pledged price increases that fit the party line.

Former finance minister Jean Chretien said in Winnipeg that he guessed the increase under the Liberals would be "around $3 or $3.50 but we have to negotiate with the provinces."

And Liberal energy critic Marc Lalonde, campaigning in Saskatoon, went no further than Trudeau's earlier commitment to increase oil prices less than the $4-a-barrel proposed by the Conservatives.

The price of domestic oil now is $14.75 a barrel, having risen $1 on Jan. 1. The defeated Tory budget called for further increases of $2 on July 1 and $1 on Oct. 1 to bring the price to $17.75 a barrel.

But all price increases must be negotiated with the provinces. Each $1-a-barrel increase raises the price of gasoline by .77 cents a litre (3.5 cents a gallon).

Trudeau had said previously that the price would rise less than the $4-a-barrel proposed by the Tories and that the Liberals would not go ahead with the Tories' proposed 4.5-cent-a-litre (18-cent-a-gallon) increase in the gasoline excise tax.

Clark is also committed to further increases which would move Canadian prices toward 85 per cent of the world level, largely dictated by prices charged by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"All we have to do is pay the OPEC prices for the imported oil, but not (for) the oil that's in the ground in Canada, not the oil that comes out of the (Western) tar sands," Trudeau said Wednesday of his formula to come up with a blended price.

"Therefore, it's simple to say we won't pay, we won't have to pay $4 because we will blend these three prices and it will be a price (increase) less than $3."

The Tories claim the Liberal blend formula would mean a $6-a-barrel increase in 1980.

Trudeau said he wouldn't arbitrarily impose an increase on the provinces.

"I'd go to the provinces with a personal proposition — one that (Ontario) Premier Davis would still say was too high and (Alberta Premier) Lougheed would say was too low.

"But I'd be there and say: 'Look, gentlemen, we can work something out. We have over the past, let's do it again'."

Trudeau said the lower increase "would mean that either the people of Alberta or the multinationals or somebody will be getting less windfall profits."

Alberta, which had agreed to the Tories' proposed $4 increase, would probably resist a smaller increase or changes in revenue-sharing arrangments.

That $4 increase was to replace a $2 increase for 1980 agreed upon last year when the Liberals still formed the federal government.

Alberta and the $3 ceiling aside, even Trudeau's earlier promise to keep the increase under $4 inspired some negative reaction in Liberal ranks.

Former Liberal cabinet minister John Reid said last week that an increase of at least $4 a barrel is probably inevitable because of recent jumps in the world price of oil.

Reid pointed out that the government is committed to paying subsidies to cover the price difference between more expensive imported oil used in eastern Canada and domestic oil.

As world prices rise faster than domestic prices, the cost of subsidies skyrocket so a new government must raise taxes, cut spending, force consumers to pay more or let the federal deficit rise to pay the difference.

But Reid said Trudeau and the Liberals are committed to no further increases in the deficit.

The cost of subsidizing imports was estimated at $1.6 billion for 1980 in the Tory budget, but finance department officials estimate subsequent price increases by some OPEC members will boost the cost to $2.7 billion. The government spent about $1.8 billion on subsidies in 1979.

Since Reid spoke, several other OPEC members have boosted their prices, bringing to 10 the number of cartel countries which have announced increases this year.

Import prices now range from about $26 U.S. charged by Saudi Arabia to about $35 U.S. charged by Libya and Nigeria.

mean that I have to get clearance direct from their foreign office.

"I've talked to them and there's a lot of things they need clearing up on the job, so I have told them that I will work for the next two to three weeks very hard and try to clear up the situation with them if they will help me to get out."

Nicole Senecal, a spokesman for the external affairs department in Ottawa, said officials are aware of Browning's plight and that he is the only other Canadian in a similar position that they are aware of.

"He was warned when we closed the embassy that the embassy staff was leaving," she said, "but also that he could get some consul help from the New Zealand embassy. I'll have to check tomorrow and see what else we can do for him." (New Zealand closed its embassy Thursday after it was broken into and looted last week.)

Senecal said that Browning could not have been included among the six U.S. diplomats spirited out of Iran with forged documents because they were risking their lives. Including him would have jeopardized the entire operation, she added.

"The embassy tried as much as they could to help him but they didn't succeed. I'll look into the case again and see what we can do through our allies."

Truckload of replacement mattresses heads to penitentiary —AP

14 inmates still missing

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — Police using dogs on chains searched Thursday through basement ducts, crawlways and a meat locker at the riot-ravaged New Mexico State Penitentiary for more victims of the inmate rebellion or hideaways who might have escaped death.

There were still 14 or 15 inmates missing five days after an uprising by drug-crazed convicts who tortured, mutilated and burned fellow prisoners in vendettas—some of them racially motivated—against "snitches" and others segregated from the general population.

If not found Thursday, authorities said, these prisoners would be presumed dead, raising the death toll from the 36-hour uprising to as high as 48, which would make it the worst prison riot in U.S. history.

Until now, officials have listed 33 convicts dead from the riot and 89 injured. State police recaptured the besieged facility Sunday without gunfire.

Assistant district attorney Dick Baker led reporters on a tour of the prison and said police tactical teams using dogs from the Santa Fe police department were searching potential basement hideaways for the prisoners still not accounted for.

Prison Warden Jerry Griffin said authorities had not ruled out the possibility that some escaped.

Asked whether he expected the death toll to rise, corrections director Felix Rodrigues said, "Maybe I'm a fool and an optimist, but I think it's going to stay around that figure"—33.

Black inmates said Thursday that the riot "turned into a racial thing." At their request, they were staying in separate quarters from white and Mexican-American inmates.

"We had to escape to save our lives," said Jessie Wright, one of the black leaders. "We seen plenty of killings. It was just a senseless, brutal massacre—butchery, just all-out butchery.

"They were actually stacking bodies on the stage in the gym and burning them," said Wright. "That's why they'll never get a full (death) count."

British bugged telephones of all embassies

LONDON (AP) — British secret services, supported by huge amounts of money laundered from other government departments, have bugged the telephones of all embassies in London, including the U.S. embassy, a British magazine reported Thursday.

The New Statesman plunged into a detailed expose of secret service methods last week with a report that a 24-hour telephone-tapping service was run from an innocuous post office building in London's Chelsea district.

A second report by the magazine's telecommunications expert, Duncan Campbell, alleged Thursday that a widespread bugging operation was run from other buildings scattered around London.

"We are trying to get our oar in before the country gets so bad you can't even talk about these things," Campbell said.

Campbell, charged in 1978 under the Official Secrets Act after writing about official taps, said he had even more embarrassing disclosures in a planned article on "corruption and accountability" in the British intelligence services.

The telephone-tapping headquarters was code-named Tinkerbell by police after the fairy in J.M. Barrie's play Peter Pan. "Tinkerbell gave Peter Pan back his shadow, and police sources coined the name from that," Campbell said.

Campbell wrote that widespread bugging—requiring Watergate-type break-ins to plant equipment—was run jointly by MI-5 counter-intelligence, the overseas intelligence service MI-6, and police from a facility in the south London district of Camberwell.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, questioned specifically in Parliament this week, said no MP had had his telephone tapped.

Campbell did not say if the bugging was still going on.

He also said that targets included—on the specific instructions of Thatcher—leaders of Rhodesia's Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance while they were in London last fall for the British-sponsored peace talks.

Meanwhile, The New Statesman said the $92 million officially approved by Parliament to pay for security and intelligence services could not possibly cover their operations.

It estimated the real cost at more than $690 million and quoted "ex-employees" as saying the difference was siphoned off from the home office, foreign office and defence department budgets and laundered through a maze of false accounts and activities.

Officials flushed over spiffy biffy

MIAMI (UPI) — Employees of a plumbing supply store thought there had been a mistake about an order for nearly $9,000 worth of gold-plated bathroom fixtures in decorator colors for use in a high school plumbing class.

They were right.

School officials have spent the week explaining how a sunken bathtub with 24-karat gold-plate grab bars, a portable jacuzzi to fit the tub, four toilets, a bidet with gold-plated trim and a top-of-the-line kitchen sink happened to be ordered for a high school for troubled youths.

Principal Solomon Barnes said he had no idea he had ordered such expensive fixtures.

He told the school board he placed the order after looking at an equipment brochure that did not list prices.

Militants under fire

TEHRAN (CP) — With tough talk and stern action, President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr hammered away Thursday at the U.S. embassy militants' remaining power and prestige among the Iranian people, as reports persisted that the American hostages at the embassy might be freed soon.

For the second straight day, the new Iranian president blasted the young Moslem radicals publicly, calling them "rebels against the government." And the Revolutionary Council, led by Bani-Sadr, took action against them, restricting their access to national radio and television.

It appeared Bani-Sadr was trying to undercut the militants' status as revolutionary heroes in preparation for a resolution of the hostage crisis being worked out behind the scenes.

A Kuwaiti newspaper, the weekly Al Khadaf, reported from Tehran that the release of the approximately 50 American hostages at the embassy was "imminent." The paper, which did not identify the source of its information, said the number of militants at the embassy had been reduced to 50 from 400.

It said UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim was trying to persuade Bani-Sadr to "pressure the students to leave the embassy and have them replaced by regular Iranian troops."

At the UN, a spokesman for Waldheim said he could not confirm the Al Khadaf report. Rudolf Stajduhar said Waldheim had not talked with U.S. or Iranian officials in the previous 24 hours, but was closely following developments in Tehran "which indicate that the authorities are trying to stabilize the situation under the presidency" of Bani-Sadr.

Deputy State Secretary Warren Christopher said on NBC-TV's Today show the situation was "somewhat promising." Spokesman George Sherman said the state department had no evidence to confirm the report. And Hodding Carter, chief department spokesman, said: "I do not see any imminent release of the hostages."

Carter said the U.S. government was still uncertain about Iran's terms for releasing the hostages, who spent their 96th day in captivity Thursday.

Tehran burglars send Kiwis home

TEHRAN (Reuter).— New Zealand has closed its embassy in Iran and all its diplomats are leaving the country following a break-in at the embassy chancery in which documents were stolen, diplomatic sources said Thursday night.

Thieves used steel cutters and torches to raid the embassy early Tuesday, snatching embassy records, commercial papers and valuables.

Domestic staff at ambassador Christopher Beeby's house said Beeby had left for Isfahan, central Iran, but later said: "Please don't ask that sort of question. We don't know. We're only telling you what we've been ordered to say."

Diplomatic sources said New Zealand had lodged a protest with the Iranian foreign ministry after the incident but had failed to secure adequate guarantees of protection.

Sniper shots fell Soviets

Associated Press

Rebel snipers have killed about 40 Soviet soldiers in the streets of a provincial capital in Afghanistan's far north, and hundreds of Afghan troops have deserted their government's cause in the area, sources in the Afghan capital of Kabul said Thursday.

The International Red Cross reported Thursday that an observer team it sent to Kabul had received permission from the Afghan government to visit political prisoners. Afghan officials say only 57 political prisoners are being held, but unofficial reports put the number at anywhere from several hundred to several thousand.

In Moscow, the Communist party newspaper Pravda accused Canada of pandering to Washington's hard line and of "crudely distorting" Soviet foreign policy.

An alderman and a road

The performance of Victoria Ald. William McElroy has been pathetic in the debate over widening of Gorge Road.

First, he wanted the matter discussed in camera this week. The merits of a road widening debated in secret? This is far from the first time Ald. McElroy has urged the discussion of public issues in secret. Such a curious attitude for a man elected as a representative of the city's citizens, a man who when first running for council in 1977 offered himself as an advocate of open, accessible government.

Addition of a centre lane for turns on Gorge Road between B.C. Forest Products and Harriet Road was considered in the first place because of a grim accident record. But a review of the facts by council's traffic committee shows traffic volume has declined and most of the accidents last year would not have been avoided had that centre lane been there. Based on traffic volume, the accident rate was no higher than elsewhere in the city.

The widening would have cost about $500,000, with the possibility of the provincial government paying half. Out of the traffic committee's debate came an option, road improvements which would cost an estimated $350,000.

Ald. McElroy still favored the road widening. Why? Because if the provincial government paid half, it would cost the city just $250,000, compared with $350,000 for the improvements alone.

Who does he think bankrolls the provincial government? Isn't it the same abused taxpayers who finance the city? Ald. McElroy, apart from your appetite for secret debate, your arithmetic is a menace.

Now that's fast

Back in the early 1960s, a young track star named Robert Lee Hayes, of Jacksonville, Florida, was dubbed "the world's fastest human." He was heavily built and his running style was not what you'd call graceful, but he could charge through the 100-yard sprint like a tornado. In June, 1963, when he established the world record of 9.1 seconds for that event, he reached a speed of over 27 m.p.h.

Today, 37-year-old Bob Hayes is still proving that he's a fast dude, but in a rather different way.

The former Olympic gold medallist and pro football player has been granted a parole and will be released from prison next month after serving only 10 months of a five-year sentence for delivering cocaine to an undercover officer.

After signing the order this week, Texas Governor Bill Clements said he had written to Mr. Hayes expressing the hope that "with his experiences now, both bad and good, he could be a great influence on young people, not only in Texas but in the entire country."

Well, maybe. But most people are going to see this act of clemency as proof that there is one law for former track and football stars and another for the ordinary guy.

COMMENT/BACKGROUND

An embassy tale we can't be proud of

Peter Worthington

TORONTO — How much credit for the rescue of six Americans by the Canadian embassy in Tehran should go to Prime Minister Clark? And how much to our ambassador to Iran, Ken Taylor?

Objectivity is clouded by partisan feelings on the issue, as all political parties attempt to use the rescue for political advantage — the Tories to capitalize on it, the Liberals to downplay it, the NDP to ignore it as much as possible.

In truth, more credit than is currently being given should go to Prime Minister Clark. Without his involvement and approval, the rescue would not have happened. It was he who authorized the issuing of phony Canadian passports, who okayed the "illegalities" to get the Americans out.

Mr. Trudeau has lavishly praised Ambassador Taylor while Mr. Trudeau's new mouthpiece, the editorials of the Toronto Star (where his semi-official biographer George Radwanski holds sway — at least until after the election when he too may disappear down a crevice like so many of his predecessors) notes in passing that the Clark government "is entitled to bask in the reflected glory of its public servants."

One wonders how Mr. Trudeau would have handled the situation. Interestingly, we can get an idea by looking back on how he, as PM, handled the crisis at the Canadian embassy in Prague when the Soviets invaded Czechoslovakia in 1968. And here I speak from first-hand experience.

At the time I was with the Toronto Telegram and managed to sneak into Prague by hiring a taxi in Vienna and literally racing along the border until finding a crossing point which had not yet been occupied by the Red Army. For a while I was the only Canadian journalist in the country.

It was difficult in Prague. Communications were tenuous, cables impossible, phone lines erratic. At the time it seemed important to get word to the outside what was happening.

Czechoslovakians, even members of the Central Committee of the Czech Communist Party, were contacting foreign journalists to get the truth out. The gallant Olympic hero, Emil Zatopek, would appear in downtown Prague to condemn the Soviets, then race to another speaking point before the Red Army or KGB hacks could move in. The chess grandmaster Ludek Pachman would meet journalists and tell what was going on. Even the police became informers for the press. We, in a word, were the lifeline of truth.

In all my life I have never covered an international crisis where right and wrong were so clearly defined. Soviet troops, in street debates with citizens, insisted they had been "invited" (shades of Afghanistan) to defend the country against American imperialism, West German revanchism and enemies of the people.

It turned out the only enemies of the Czech people were the Russians. This truth was too much for some young Red Army soldiers who blew their brains out when they couldn't make compromises with their consciences.

It was a difficult time and all journalists sought help from their embassies. And all embassies gave help — all, that is except the Canadian embassy. Rarely have I felt so unwelcome. Rarely have I encountered such a climate of diplomatic nervousness and neutrality. Rarely have I felt such shame for Canada.

All I wanted was to transmit my stories over the embassy telex. A request was made to Ottawa — the reply: "No way!" It would violate diplomatic neutrality and endanger the embassy's position. Ottawa was adamant. The embassy, taking its lead from Trudeau's government — which had been in power roughly the same length of time as Joe Clark's Tory government has been — was totally unco-operative.

I recall a laconic Fleet Street friend commenting after visiting our embassy: "Tell me, old boy, which side are your chaps on?"

Finally I threw myself on the mercies of other embassies — notably the American and British. The Americans especially were the essence of co-operation and courage. I was saved — the Tely was served. One other Canadian journalist arrived from the Vancouver Sun. He was cold-shouldered, too. And for several days he failed to get any messages out — his readers were deprived of the Canadian viewpoint by our craven embassy and a misguided policy coming from the Trudeau government.

I got the Tely's publisher, John Bassett, to exert pressure — and he got the Vancouver Sun's publisher, Stuart Keate, to join in a protest. Again to no avail.

Our embassy in Prague remained aloof. Alone among Western embassies it failed to stand up for Western values. What would have happened to the six Americans if such an attitude had prevailed at our embassy in Tehran?

I complained to External Affairs Miniter Mitchell Sharp and identified senior embassy staff by name. Mr. Sharp, being Mr. Sharp, said he agreed with the embassy position because to do otherwise would have compromised Canada and endangered the embassy.

He overlooked the reality that all other embassies acted in concert and suffered no reprisals. Canada was wrong. So was Trudeau.

A similar policy still prevailed when the Canadian embassy was evacuated from Saigon in 1975 when, under orders from the Trudeau government, none of the Vietnamese embassy employees were evacuated because we still paid homage to the crumbling Thieu government. A disgusting act of betrayal and cowardice.

This is why our Tehran embassy is so refreshing, so surprising. Credit must go to Joe Clark for setting the tone — just as shame must be shared by Pierre Trudeau for past failures.

To me the difference is sufficient reason for re-electing Joe Clark's Tories on Feb. 18.

Victoria Irwin
Christian Science Monitor

In World War II it was "Rosie the riveter." If the United States turns again to the draft, will it be "Rosie the riflewoman"?

Within the next few days President Carter is expected to announce his decision on whether women should be required to add their names to draft registration lists.

Many young American women today say they are ready to register. If Uncle Sam calls their brothers, they say, he should call them, too.

"I think women are just as capable as men," said Lori Campbell, a senior at the University of Washington in Seattle. She is ready to do service in the military — after she finishes her degree in accounting and international business.

But Miss Campbell, like a lot of others, added a condition: "The ERA is not ratified now. It should be. After it is, then I will go — no qualms."

Young women like Lori do not even question that they some day will take part in running the country. And many agree that if the draft is reinstated, they should accept the obligation of military service along with men.

The issue of drafting women into the military service for the first time in U.S. history has come one step closer with Carter's recent decision to reactivate the Selective Service System.

The president has said he will not decide until this week whether to include women in the registration of 18-to-26-year olds. Secretary of Defence Harold Brown and Secretary of the Army Clifford L. Alexander Jr., as well as First Lady Rosalynn Carter, have come out in favor of the registration of women.

The current all-volunteer U.S. armed forces already include about 150,000 women. A registration program for a draft, which must be approved by Congress, will not necessarily mean women (or men) will be drafted.

But the subject of registering women already is provoking intense debate. Speaker of the House Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. (D) of Massachusetts has said the House would not approve registration of women for the draft. He has urged the White House not to ask for it.

Some women do not favor the drafting of either sex. Feminist Gloria Steinem, co-editor of Ms. magazine, recently took that stand. But if the draft were begun again, she said, it should include both men and women. On the other hand, women who have opposed the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) to the U.S. Constitution now are saying "I told you so" after predicting for years that equal rights would mean drafting of women.

The Christian Science Monitor found a diversity of opinions in a random sampling of young women it asked about registration and the draft.

"What's fair for men is fair for women," said Martha Weiss, a student at Radcliffe College in Cambridge, Mass. Her friend, Jean Riesman, also of Radcliffe, agreed and said that women who offer should be allowed combat duty if they meet the requirements.

Cher Magnuson, a senior at Reynolds High School in Troudale, Ore., is more concerned about the thought of war than of registering. "It's kind of scary," she said. "If there was a war, could it solve anything?"

Classmate Michelle Morrell said she feels women should be included in any draft because she believes in equal rights. "But I don't think I could ever use a gun," she added.

Other women wonder about combat, although servicewomen currently are barred from frontline jobs.

"I have mixed feelings about the draft for women," said Susan Denise, a graduate student at Columbia University. "I'd be willing to serve in some capacity, but not on the front lines. And I would do it because I have to, not because I want to."

The National Organization for Women (NOW), which has fought for equality in the armed services, has come down hard against registration for males or females.

Eleanor Smeal, president of NOW, sees selective service as a "sexist" and "racist" system which has caused discrimination against the poor, minorities and women, while lowering the quality of the military forces.

"The volunteer armed service is of higher quality than the draft, and would be even more so if it were free of discrimination against women and minorities," said a statement from the NOW president.

Some women say it would be unfair if Carter pushed for registration of women when — from their point of view — he has not pushed hard to secure a constitutional amendment on equality of the sexes.

The Israelis are living well beyond their means

Ralph Bennett
Copley News Service

JERUSALEM — Israelis are worried about the economy of their country.

A recent Hebrew University poll showed the average Israeli was more concerned over the country's economic situation than over its security situation. Small wonder. The annual rate of inflation in November was 120 per cent.

The value of the Israeli pound has dropped to less than three U.S. cents. It was worth 36 cents in 1950. The balance of trade deficit for Israel last year was more than $3 billion, up 55 per cent from 1978.

But, with all this bad economic news, the average Israeli worker remains, as yet, personally unaffected. That is why such a staggering inflation rate has been tolerated. Wages are indexed to the cost of living and real wages actually rose more than 10 per cent last year over 1978.

Government services remain generous. Israel is a welfare state, founded by European socialists determined to give all citizens the security of a full range of public services. There are twice as many doctors and twice as many office calls per capita in Israel's national health program as in Britain's. There is one teacher for every 12 pupils in Israel's Hebrew public schools — a higher teacher-pupil ratio than in the United States.

Israel, never self-sufficient since gaining its independence in 1948, now has the highest foreign debt per capita in the world. It has received more foreign aid from the United States than any nation except South Vietnam — $20 billion since 1973. It gets $500 million a year from the United Jewish Appeal and the sale of Israel bonds abroad. But all those remittances are not enough, as the inflation rate demonstrates.

One big reason is Israel's high rate of defence spending — 30 per cent of the gross national product, compared to less than 1 per cent for Japan, 5 per cent for the United States and an estimated 13 per cent for the Soviet Union.

Can Israel continue to print money at the rate of more than $200 million a month in order to maintain its public services and raise real wages while spending so much on defence?

The government headed by Prime Minister Menachem Begin thinks not. There is no talk of reducing defence expenditures, despite the fact that Israel is now so strong that, in the opinion of some military experts, a number of Arab nations are vulnerable to an Israeli pre-emptive attack. The cuts will have to come in butter, not guns.

Real wages of the workers will have to come down, and high spending on health and education must be reduced, in the view of at least one high government official — Ezra Sadan, an economist who has taught at Berkeley.

"We have to have more discipline, first and above all," he said. "It will be a painful thing to cut tens of thousands of jobs from the public sector. It will hurt politically to accept a reduction in real wages. But the people can take a blow, if it is for a purpose. We must cut the budget down to size by April. If we do not, we shall take the blame."

Many Israelis who support Begin's hard-line foreign policy and his insistence that Israel will retain sovereignty over all of Jerusalem and the Arab lands it has occupied since 1967 question the government's economic policy.

Begin recently appointed a tough new finance minister, businessman Yigael Hurvitz, who is determined to slow down inflation, even if it takes unpopular measures.

The willingness of the pilots of El Al, Israel's international airline, to accept a 20 per cent salary cut for 1980 is cited as evidence that Israelis now are ready to make sacrifices so that their country will not continue living beyond its means.

But the big question is what effect any reduction in the standard of living or any increase in unemployment will have upon immigration and emigration trends. Anything that makes living in Israel less attractive is likely to encourage Jews from the Soviet Union (now Israel's main source of immigrants) to go to the United States instead of Israel and to increase the number of Israelis who leave the country in search of greener pastures.

Those demographic trends threaten the future of Israel's most vital necessity — the majority of Jews over non-Jews in its population.

Neighbors who live side by side share more than mail deliveries and garbage pickups.

They're part of a community that absorbs one another's sounds, lifestyles, and overflow.

Yet, the neighbors of some of television's series stars are never seen. I somehow find them more fascinating than the stars.

Don't you ever wonder about the people who live next door to the Incredible Hulk? Have they noticed how upset he gets over little things by knocking out walls with his fists? Do neighborhood kids let the air out of his tires just to see him turn green and grow? Is he on everyone's list for the Halloween party?

Wouldn't you love to live next to Jim Rockford? That little trailer of his by the beach attracts more visitors than the Lincoln Memorial. There isn't a week goes by that someone isn't shooting at him, knocking on his door in the advanced stages of hysteria, or ordering him into a long, black car at gunpoint. I can just see his neighbors, Fred and Margaret. Fred rolls over in bed and mumbles to Margaret, "Is Rockford home?" and Margaret says sleepily, "You just heard his car blow up, didn't you? Of COURSE he's home!"

Haven't you ever been curious about the Welcome Wagon lady who paid a courtesy call to Mork and Mindy and later reported, "The girl is okay, but the guy has a cork that won't stay on top of the water — if you get my drift. When I gave him a free pastry brush, he stood on his head on the sofa and put it in his ear."

With my luck, I'd buy a house next to the Bionic Woman who opens up cans of tuna with her fingernails and jumps over three shopping carts on double stamp day. I'd be the idiot who suggests we go jogging in the mornings to get some exercise.

Come to think of it, Baretta, the Ropers, Charlie's Angels, the Happy Days family, Laverne and Shirley, the cast of Three's Company and Eight Is Enough are probably no weirder than most of the neighbors I've lived next to.

I've listened to my share of slammed doors, scuffling, heavy breathing, shouting, wall-to-wall kids and undesirables, and viewed my share of strange habits and bizarre behavior.

But there's one thing I can't remember. I never lived next to a laugh-track that enjoyed life so much.

GORDE HUNTER

one man's opinion

The premier of this province has called it British Columbia Place—a monumental dream of a spot over there at Vancouver's False Creek and presumably with a dream of a price tag.

The whole project isn't even close to being known at this point, but it will be grandiose. It will be Roman Empire grandiose and it will be pushed through despite the strong objections of economists, trampled little people and hard-thinking middle classers who reason there are one helluva lot more good priorities in need of the type of cash this vision will command.

A couple of weeks back I stood and listened as Bill Bennett gave a quick sketch of the plan. His eyes fairly shone, his voice was tinged with the silver of the evangalist spreading the word to the flock and his enthusiasm was genuine. I casually asked how much of our money he would be needing to bring the dream to fruition and he just as casually told me it would be in the neighborhood of one billion green ones. This, you realize, makes it a pretty spiffy neighborhood.

A big part of this whole complex would be the amphitheatre, to be built for the gratification of the professional football and professional soccer promoters. They have been crying poor for a number of years and making obscene statements about old Empire Stadium, the public place they're forced to play in at this time. It should be made clear the B.C. Lions and the Vancouver Whitecaps had nothing to do with the financing of Empire Stadium—they've merely paid a token rent you could stick in your eye.

WHY PUBLIC FUNDS should be allocated for a new home for these professional teams has never been made completely clear. They are, if you want, leeches of the worst kind because their rent payments won't even take care of the interest charges on the estimated $100 million cost. Estimated is the key word because you know and I know that by the time the last piece of artificial turf is in place, the figure will be considerably higher than $100 million.

Hopefully there will be future outcry from the loyal Opposition, although for the life of me I can't understand why that voice has been so completely mute on the subject so far. I reasoned some time ago this might be because of the placing of the complex—right there where Dave Barrett, Emery Barnes, Gary Lauk, Alex Macdonald and Rosemary get their votes. In some instances any stance against the complex might be construed as a vote against motherhood and dogma could go out the window. Mind you, the same could be said about the Socred members of the Vancouver area, but that would be academic anyway because there is no way they would vote against the boss.

I am reasonably confident, however, that once the Legislature gets down to business at the end of this month, Dave and his troops will produce the necessary embarrassing questions. Maybe I can be of help by suggesting at least a couple.

IT HAS BEEN made rather abundantly clear by Hydro boss Robert Bonner that if this land of ours is to become energy self-sufficient by the end of the decade, it will cost in excess of $30 billion every year of the way. Now that money has to come from somewhere and British Columbians will be asked to donate their fair or unfair share. Energy has to be of far greater importance than airy fairy plans for False Creek and it should be remembered energy isn't an either/or proposition.

Can there be any real argument that hospital facilities in many parts of this province are in dire need of monetary transfusions? Surely the situation in Victoria is a reasonable example of what I ask—the operative and extended care boondoggle that has doctors, administrators and patients in a state of absolute confused concern. A few million dollars would rectify the problem, but the few million is not forthcoming, it is promised, instead, for a new stadium to help ailing professional sport franchises. A despicable priority.

The Bennett dream might well be affordable—along with the other necessities mentioned above—but he must prove to the citizens of British Columbia we do have the ability to handle them all. Therefore all the financial cards should be placed before us and I'm afraid the only way this will come about will be through shrill demands by not only the media, but by the official Opposition as well. Dave Barrett, mark my words, will be the key to this one.

At least he should be.

"Of course, she was slim when I first married her."

Keynsian theory unrelated to NDP

Ed Broadbent whines that we must pump money into the economy because Keynes, economic theory demands it! Keynes has been dead some 30 years and is thus unable to defend himself against the slanderous suggestion that Ed Broadbent and the NDP believe in Keynsian economic theory.

The years 1972 to 1975 were the good economic years of the 1970's. Keynes' theory required that governments hold back on spending in these periods but the Trudeau minority government were levered by David Lewis, Ed Broadbent and the NDP into consecutive $6 billion deficits.

No, the NDP do not believe in Keynes, economic theory. they believe in deficits, small deficits in good times, larger deficits in slack times and very large deficits in tough times—but deficits all the time!

I, for one, am ashamed that we are leaving our children a $65 billion debt. They deserve a better inheritance than that from our wasteful generation!

English language of unity

Regarding the protest directed to the Alberta educational system in your letters of Jan. 31, the writer appears to be one of those stalwart semi-British Canadians who stood firmly by while for the last 40 years the nationalistic forces of Quebec have eroded our traditions (and spent our money).

The young lady of German descent has reason to be annoyed, as have those of Italian, Dutch, Ukranian, etc. English is the prime language of Canada and all others, including French, are secondary.

Anyone living on this North American continent should rid him or herself of tunnel vision and in looking about will find that English is the language of complete unity.

Candidate's sensitivity questioned

The New Democratic Party candidate in Victoria is claiming sensitivity and understanding in his advertisements for this election—sensitivity to whom? The people of Victoria who only last November elected him to his position of alderman to represent them on city council? His callous dismissal of their trust to work for them in city affairs, and his using Victorians as a stepping stone to Ottawa does not illustrate sensitivity, but blatant abuse.

As to his understanding, how practical is that, when he makes grandiose pronouncements like sanctions against the United States to stop tankers moving down our coast. The tankers carrying oil from Alaska to Washington are American built, American crewed and controlled by stringent American environment standards.

Most important, the tankers are moving through international waters, not Canadian waters, and only started moving because Canada stopped shipping by pipeline. Even if all the foregoing were not true, in what practical sense does the NDP candidate propose that this country impose sanctions against Canada's largest trading partner?

Ads insult to viewers

Dan Turner's despatch from Toronto (Colonist, Jan. 31 citing views of some Torontonians on the present series of television ads must surely find a sympathetic ear in many of us.

Nightly we are being sickened and outraged by this vitriolic verbal abuse on the leaders of our political parties, which tells us nothing of a constructive nature concerning the real and the very vital issues of this unnecessary, unwanted, unthrifty, and unethical election. All of us, of whatever political persuasion, must feel saddened at the depths to which politics have sunk. These nightly natterings are an insult to all Canadians; an affront to our dignity and intelligence.

What a beautiful reprisal it would be if everyone could manifest our collective disgust across the nation by refusing to vote at all.

Nerve protection

The U.S.A. is considering putting a large solar energy collector in space and beaming the electron energy to earth by microwave—electron-magnetic beam.

If someone were to enter that diffuse beam the microwave electron energy would infiltrate the human nerve system and trigger the nerve system to register sensation signals on the brain.

Because of the large amounts of electron magnetic wave energy in the air and the tremendous increase in use of electron energy transmission, we humans require enforced legislation to protect our nerve systems from electron-magnetic wave infiltration pollution.

We need privacy protection legislation at the provincial and federal level.

Pension salute

I notice several letters about a pensioner, Mrs. Alice Hopkins, who wrote inquiring about who was responsible for old age pensions so that she could thank them.

What amazes me is that she was 94 before she became curious about socialism.

Yes, I know there is a wall of silence about the various programs introduced by the socialists and which eventually became law, but she must have been aware of the vast changes these programs made. To mention a few, child labor, suffrage, the right to organize union agreements, the 8-hour day, 5-day week, unemployment insurance, social insurance.

Though I'm 20 years her junior I would like to add my voice of thanks too.

Abortion choice woman's alone

With regard to tighter controls on abortion, we are telling every woman in Canada she should not be allowed to decide what her own body will be used for. Few men would knowingly accept such restrictions on their own freedom.

Rafe Mair, the provincial health minister, and government in general, have no right to tell a woman she may not have an abortion.

If a woman is considered mentally competent she should make the decision herself. Only if she is declared mentally incompetent should her freedom and responsibility to choose be taken from her.

The only involvement of Canadian law in such an issue should be a requirement for the doctor to insure that the woman is mentally competant and aware of the risks, costs and benefits for herself, the child and society.

Abuse of the health care system by some doctors and patients is a problem that is not limited to the matter of abortion. The availability of medical staff willing to be involved in an abortion may also be a problem. These, and other problems, do not justify the statutory restrictions that now exist. In fact, the restrictions support the problems.

If people who call for restrictions of abortion had to bear the emotional and material costs of bearing and raising the children in question, their hypocrisy would soon become evident as they began calling for more contraception and abortion in the same self-righteous breath.

ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM

KAMLOOPS, B.C. — The very serious reporter from the very serious Toronto paper shook his head in consternation and said "have you ever heard a worse political speech than that in your life?"

Having led a very long life full of a lot of very bad political speeches, I had to confess that it ranked right up there with the lousiest, true; but actually I had heard the man make worse.

This was after Pierre Trudeau stunned a $10-dollar-a-plate crowd of 930 Liberals with a listless word-fumbling speech that—if anyone else had made it—would have been ascribed to too much giggle juice.

Much of the embarrassment felt in the crowd and the amusement expressed on the press row was because Trudeau insisted on referring warmly to the Liberal candidate for Kamloops-Shuswap as Mark Bryson when the man's name is actually Mack.

It does not rank as one of the world's greatest errors, but the incident and whole speech illustrated once again two interesting things about Trudeau: His lack of stamina and his strange attitude toward names.

The flannel-tongued performance was actually a result of the insensitive B.C. organizers who made him sit through an interminable meal in a warehouse-like hall.

Throughout this tour, his packagers have had him make his speech before the meal, then either exit or sit among the matron-groupies to fulfill his touchie-feelie functions.

Pierre Trudeau the man who exhausts easily. Despite the famed body of a 25-year old, the man who looks superb at 60 and swims and skies and canoes cannot go for long stretches.

He never could, perhaps due to the fact that all that cerebral electricity coursing through his brain cells drains his muscular body.

Although Joe Clark is possibly the most unathletic man that God in Her wisdom ever created, he has much more stamina than Trudeau, his nervous energy driving him forever onward. The other phenomenon is names. Pierre Trudeau the celebrated intellect who in days will be Prime Minister of Canada once again, simply cannot remember names.

Perhaps, again, it has something to do with his thought processes, like the police whistle that only German shepherds can hear, being so concerned with ethereal matters denied the rest of us that mere monikers do not register with him.

Perhaps, he simply doesn't care—like the Kennedy's and the Royals who never carry money, content in the knowledge some shuffling courtier will always be handy when needed.

Journalist George Radwanski is his biographer. He, like his subject, is a graduate lawyer and Trudeau—who dislikes most reporters with some vigor—appreciated Radwanski's analytical mind and granted him endless hours of interviews on the way to the book, Trudeau, that became a best seller.

Several weeks later Radwanski stood up at an Ottawa press conference. "Yes, Jack?" said Trudeau who then looked in puzzlement as reporters collapsed in laughter.

A long time aide shrugged last week and said, it was only last year that he got my name right.

One of the great campaign moments came several elections back when Trudeau, on a Toronto platform, waxed warmly about the candidate he thought so much of: "Danny Barson . . .uh Banny Danson . . .er, uh . . .Barney Danson".

Trudeau once had a private meeting with Dennis McDermott, one of the best known figures in Canada as President of the Canadian Labor Congress. Trudeau got it in his head that his companion was named, Terry, and solemnly called him that through the meeting.

A fuming McDermott, whose vanity is only slightly less than that of his companion, finally repeated to Trudeau a talk he once had with the legendary Walter Reuther in which Reuther, lecturing the young McDermott, said, "Dennis, you've got to r e m e m b e r this . . . Dennis, you shouldn't forget . . .

Trudeau listened politely, then said, that's a very interesting story, Terry.

During Trudeau's third campaign in 1974, his speech writers attempted to soften his intellectual reputation before a speech to a labor audience.

It was the time when Hank Aaron was approaching Babe Ruth's all-time home run record and it was suggested to Himself that he use the analogy with his three elections: You may have one strike on Hank Aaron and you may have two strikes on Hank Aaron, but he has to be given a chance at a third strike.

Trudeau: "Who's Hank Aaron?"

"Well, er, you see, sir, he's a baseball player who's trying to break the home run record of Babe Ruth."

"Who's Babe Ruth?"

When the eyeballs stopped rolling, it was explained who Babe Ruth was and Trudeau caught the idea, okayed it and later stood before his blue-collared sports fans.

No one counts Hank Aaron out just because he has two strikes on him, he said, adding that Aaron, of course, was the man out to beat the record of the famous Baby Ruth.

'Unspeakable in pursuit of uneatable'

Surely one of the more disgusting aspects of the British Columbia political scene these days is the baying and yapping of so-called "reporters" hot on the heels of various government leaders, sniffing out fancied wrongdoings and generally comporting themselves in the manner voiced by George Bernard Shaw when he described an English fox hunt as "The unspeakable in pursuit of the uneatable."

Hardly a day goes by without some snide reference in the newspapers or on television to Grace McCarthy, a lady who has done a whole lot of good for British Columbians during her years of public service. There is perhaps an air of flamboyance attached to her person and to her actions and I suspect it is this characteristic that maddens the media drabs who seek to puff themselves up at her expense.

Lately, Bill Bennett, too, has found himself firmly held in the slavering jaws of the media hounds, each of whom is apparently convinced he/she is another Woodward-Bernstein, very, very close to uncovering Watergates here, there and everyplace else in the province.

I expect from this general condemnation the Colonist's Jim Hume seems to be the only fair-minded reporter in the whole pack. As a matter of fact, his balanced reports and opinion columns indicate he is the only reporter in the province who does not devote his waking hours to the unseating of the Social Credit government and to the return of the damn-the-expense, let's-give-everybody-everything NDPers.

As for the rest, they are by no means as clever as they make themselves out to be. If they were, they would certainly see that the voters are turned off by their ceaseless snapping and snarling at a provincial government that has restored some order to B.C. financial affairs while continuing to provide the services we need.

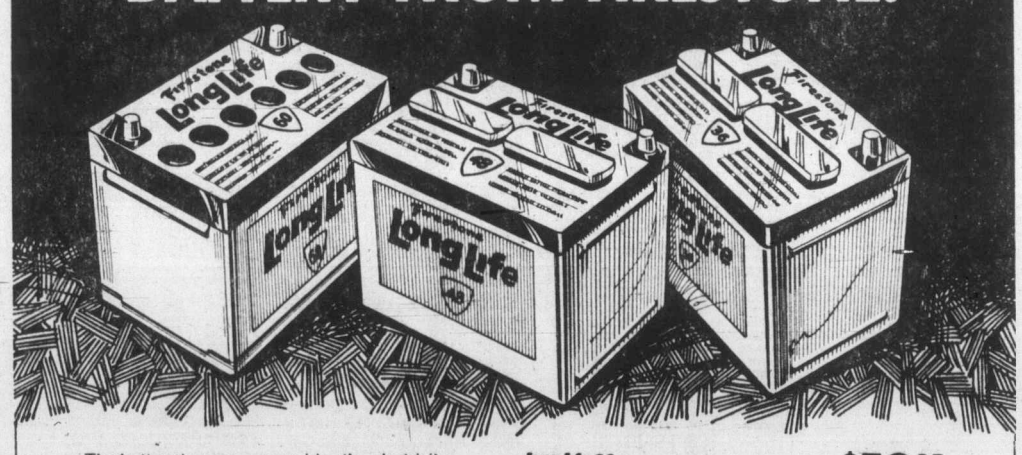
LONG LIFE MEANS MORE THAN JUST A MAINTENANCE-FREE BATTERY FROM FIRESTONE.



The battery in your car provides the electricity needed to crank the engine and fire the spark plugs to start the engine. Without a good battery all the electrical systems fail.

Firestone Long Life batteries give you power to spare for cold weather starts. Oh yes, and maintenance-free means it never needs water added under normal conditions, reduces gassing, virtually eliminates corrosion from the battery and reduces self-discharge.

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market soared to an all-time high Thursday amid heavy buying in oil and gas issues.

The TSE 300 index leaped set a record high.

John Ing, senior vice-president and portfolio strategist with Mead and Co. Ltd., said there's no doubt the price of oil will continue to escalate.

Oil stocks, he said, are among the best assets to have.

Canadian Pacific is the most heavily-weighted company in the transportation index and was behind the rise Thursday. A gain of $1 in Canadian Pacific shares moves the transportation index 61.62 points.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices rose sharply in active trading on the Canadian bond market Thursday, in the face of a weakening U.S. market.

The short end of the market remained gained 50 cents. Mid-, long-term and provincial issues rose three points. Corporates were up two points.

Day-to-day money was available at 15 per cent.

Although investor activity had been minimal for then past two weeks, accounts began to enter the the market earlier this week placing pressure on dealer's short positions and causing an upward swing in prices, an anlalyst from Levesque, Beaubien Inc. said.

The U.S. market, however, remained under considerable pressure as participants became aware that that double digit inflation could become a more permanent fixture than had previously been considered, dealers said.

Livestock

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts Thursday at the Calgary public stockyards totalled 968 head, consisting of a heavy run of average condition slaughter cows with a normal run of slaughter steers and heifers. Trade was moderate on slaughter steers and cows, while slaughter heifers met a dull local demand. A1-2 slaugher steers sold 50 cents lower while slaughter heifers sold a full $1 lower. Slaughter cows remained steady with D1 being in short supply. Too few good bulls to quote prices. A1-2 steers over 1,000 lbs. $77.50-$79.20; A3-4 74-76. A1-2 heifers over 850 lbs. 73-75; A3-4 70-73. D1-2 cows 54.50-57.50; D3-4 50-55. Light receipts of short keep feeder heifers sold steady. Good feeder heifers over 800 lbs. 75-80.

BCRIC target comes clearer

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist business editor

Strong suggestions about the areas in which B.C. Resources Investment Corp. is aiming its millions for possible acquisition came Thursday from corporation president David Helliwell in his speech to the Men's Canadian Club.

Helliwell said of the planning process:

"I can tell you that it is being built on the basic objective of maximizing the value of the company — through growth in both earnings and assets — to the benefit of all our shareholders.

"I can tell you that we expect to do that primarily through investment in natural resource industries in western Canada."

Helliwell
. . . two sectors

Later, he added:

"In terms of our investment strategies, it is fair to say that our planning is more advanced in two sectors — forestry and energy. To a large extent this results from the fact that there we already have holdings.

"In reviewing BCRIC's position in forest products, we have been measuring our situation against what could be considered an ideal balance among the main elements of that business — fibre supply, conversion facilities and markets. It's apparent to us that we should improve our present balance by expanding our investment in forest products," Helliwell said.

The president went on to detail how involved the corporation has become in the search for oil and gas, "beyond the borders of B.C." and that it has upped its budget for land acquisitions from an initial $30 million to $170 million in a five-year program.

He also added that thanks to the huge success of the share offering the corporation has the financial clout to acquire almost anything.

In response to questioners, he said that they could be assured that BCRIC was not considering putting any of its funds into either B.C. Place, Trident Aircraft Ltd. or Emily Carr paintings.

Helliwell, in a post-address interview, also said that he could not and would not say when any acquisitions would be made.

"Remember, I said last June that such an acquisition would be done within a year, so we've got a few months to go," he said, adding that to disclose the timing of such a move would perhaps jeopardize present negotiations.

Everybody's business

A company such as the B.C. Resources Corp. has most of the population of the province looking over its shoulders. Therefore, it knows the importance of keeping lines of communication open with its shareholders. Corporation president David Helliwell said here Thursday that other companies could follow such a path and be "responsive to the human concerns and demands of the public."

"I don't have to tell you that we live in a complex, rapidly-changing world, in which shifts in human values, such as the work ethic, environmental concern and pursuit of lifestyles, place ever-increasing demands on all institutions, including business," Helliwell said.

"Most corporations today recognize that they have responsibilities to others besides shareholders. The question is usually how far they should go to fulfill their obligations.

"There is the Milton Friedman school of corporate social conscience. Mr. Friedman says the business of business is business — that is, a corporation exists solely to make a profit for its shareholders — and leave the 'do-gooder' social concerns for governments and politicians.

"It is just this kind of insensitivity — sometimes real, sometimes perceived — that has got business into hot water with the rest of society over the years.

"Today, the drive by business for higher profits is seen by a significant segment of the public as a major cause of inflation. And large profits during a period of high inflation and unemployment are seen by some as a disgrace."

Helliwell said the response of business to such issues could be more convincing.

"Let me hasten to say, however, that I'm not advocating that we give way the store. A corporation's survival — and its ability to perform — still depends on its ability to earn a reasonable profit and a fair return on shareholders' equity.

"But there are other values to be considered, other demands that society is making of business today. So, business, as a member and a creature of that society, must be aware of these demands and respond to them effectively if it is to survive."

Mexican oil earmarked for Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Mexico will begin shipping 50,000 barrels of crude oil a day to Canada in October and will increase deliveries to 100,000 barrels a day in 1981, the Mexican ambassador to Canada said Thursday.

The oil deliveries will be part of an energy and trade agreement to be signed between the two countries when Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo visits Ottawa this spring.

Canada now imports an average of 450,000 barrels of crude oil a day. Last year, Venezuela supplied about 41 per cent of the country's imported oil and Saudi Arabia supplied about 37.5 per cent.

BUSINESS

Chrysler's 1979 loss topped $1 billion

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. lost $1.097 billion last year, more than any other U.S. company ever has lost on its day-to-day business.

The deficit — $3 million a day — was close to what Chrysler predicted — $1.073 billion — when it applied for U.S. government help last summer. It amounts to $17.18 a share.

The struggling No. 3 auto-maker in the U.S.lost $205 million or $3.54 a share in 1978. Before the car market collapsed last spring, it was forecasting a break-even year.

But the market slump dragged Chrysler's worldwide sales down 19 per cent to 1.8 million, resulting in a fall in revenue of 12 per cent from 1978's $13.6 billion to $12 billion.

Royal forms energy bank in Calgary

CALGARY (UPC) — The Royal Bank of Canada announced creation of a new "Global Energy Group" Thursday to service and expand its financing of multi-billion dollar energy and mining projects in Canada and abroad.

"Our studies have convinced us that energy will be the fastest growing investment sector in the global economy between now and the year 2000," Royal president Rowland Frazee told a news conference.

"Quite frankly, we are aiming at becoming recognized as one of the world's leading energy banks ... 20 per cent of our business lending is related to energy and we see this increasing in the years ahead."

Bank vice presidents Dr. Ralph Sultan of Montreal and H.E. 'Ted' McClenaghan of Toronto will head the new group. It will be centred in Calgary with offices in Toronto, Vancouver, Houston, London and the Far East.

"It is our intention to build up ... a worldwide capability to identify financing opportunities in the energy and mining areas," Frazee said.

The leading banker forecast Canada alone would need more than $200 billion in the 1980s to finance energy projects and up to $1.4 trillion by the year 2000.

"We plan to increase penetration of the market for financing of conventional gas and oil ... other energy-related fields such as synthetic fuels, oil sands, petrochemicals, coal, uranium and liquid natural gas ... in pipelines, LNG, and other energy transportation systems," Frazee said.

"Development of non-energy minerals in the mining sector will receive greater attention."

The new banking group will amalgamate the Royal's oil and gas departments in Calgary and London, England, with the mining department in Vancouver and Toronto. It will be staffed by engineers, geologists and economists.

This technical unit, Frazee said, would gather current data on developments in the energy field, perform geological and engineering evaluations and advise clients on economic and financial aspects of energy projects.

In the past two years, the Royal helped provide financing for 33 consortiums that raised more than $7 billion for energy projects in 29 foreign countries.

The Royal was involved in coal, gas and oil developments in the United States and Frazee said its New York and Houston offices will expand business through energy and mineral resource clients in the southwestern U.S. and Latin America.

"Our London office will be strengthened to handle increasing opportunities in the United Kingdom and Continental Europe, the Middle East and Africa," Frazee said. The bank has provided financing for North Sea oil projects.

"As well, we will be paying particular attention to the Pacific Rim countries."

Gold slips below $700 again

NEW YORK (AP) — The price of gold slipped back under the $700 U.S. an ounce on bullion markets Thursday, while the dollar's value was mixed on foreign currency exchanges.

Gold hit $718 an ounce in London Wednesday, the first time it had passed $700 in two weeks, but turned around Thursday amid optimism over the release of the U.S. hostages in Tehran. It closed at $692.50.

In Zurich, gold fell $8 to $702.50, while in New York, gold for February delivery fell $23.50 to $689.50 on the Commodity Exchange Inc. Later, Republic National Bank of New York quoted gold at $690, off $18.

In Hong Kong, gold opened this morning at $688.71, down $25.24 from Thursday's close, and edged up to $691.80 in early trading.

The strong British pound was off slightly against the dollar Thursday. But traders in London speculated the pound could be bolstered by a rumored change in the way the Bank of England controls the nation's money supply.

Traders said a change, similar to a move undertaken by the U.S. Federal Reserve last fall, could allow Britain's already-high interest rates to move even higher. A climb in interest rates could bolster the pound by attracting investors in search of high yields offered by pound-denominated securities.

The pound fell to $2.3025 in New York from Wednesday's $2.3145. Earlier in London, the pound dropped to $2.3005 from $2.3130 a day earlier.

The dollar closed at 240.12 Japanese yen in New York and 240.10 yen in Tokyo. On Wednesday, the dollar was quoted at 239.90 yen in New York and at 240.35 yen in the Japanese capital.

Car sales off 6% in January

TORONTO (CP) — New car sales in Canada dropped about six per cent in January from the same month a year ago, despite a record performance by General Motors of Canada Ltd. dealers.

Total car sales fell to 51,596 from 54,748, while truck sales declined to 22,645 from 23,805.

GM reported record car sales of 30,689, up from 28,596 a year ago, while truck sales were 10,851 against 11,218.

Ford of Canada Ltd. had sales of 10,035 cars in January compared with 13,167 a year ago and 8,407 trucks against 8,490.

Chrysler Canada Ltd. car sales were 9,189 against 11,901 and truck sales 2,786 compared with 3,497.

American Motors (Canada) Ltd. increased sales in January to 1,683 from 1,084 a year ago.

Record year for oil industry

CALGARY (CP) — Exploration and production in the Canadian oil industry reached record levels during 1979, the Canadian Petroleum Association says in its annual year-end review and forecast for 1980.

Expenditures for 1979 are estimated at $13 billion compared with $10.9 billion in 1978. The report, by association chairman Fraser Allen, says the industry reinvested its entire cash flow and borrowed additional capital to finance the increased activity.

Increased revenues in 1979 were offset by cost increases of 20 per cent, it says.

Natural gas production increased slightly to 187 million cubic metres a day, while production of conventional and synthetic crude oil was substantially greater at 239 million cubic metres a day, up from 209 million cubic metres.

The crude oil increase was largely possible through an oil-swap program that resulted in full-capacity production throughout the year, the association says.

It also says a survey by the federal energy department indicates that the exploration and production sector of the industry reinvested 96.3 per cent of the cash it generated. The association's own figures derived from Statistics Canada, and provincial government data indicated closer to 105-per-cent reinvestment.

The report says recent announcements of success in northern and eastern offshore exploration are reason for optimism this year, but uncertainties about federal incentives will likely have a dampening effect on frontier exploration.

Drilling in the western sedimentary basin was expected to increase by as much as 15 per cent in 1980. An estimated 7,800 holes were drilled during 1979 compared with 7,170 in 1978.

Allen says the industry is gearing up for its most active winter exploration and development program.

"There are excellent prospects of increasing the industry rate of discovery of new oil and gas during 1980."

Getty Oil pipeline partner

SEATTLE (AP) — Getty Oil Co. has acquired an indirect interest in Northern Tier Pipeline Co., which has proposed building a $1.6 billion port and pipeline to carry Alaskan crude to the Midwest, a Getty spokesman in Los Angeles confirmed Thursday.

Two weeks ago, Getty, a major oil producer, bought Reserve Oil and Gas Co. of Denver, which owns Western Crude Oil Inc., also of Denver. Western Crude owns a 13 per cent equity share of Northern Tier, based in Billings, Mont.

Dawson Creek land involved in swap

CALGARY (CP) — Home Oil Co. Ltd. and Canadian Hunter Exploration Ltd. said Thursday they have agreed to exchange substantial oil and natural gas holdings in western Canada.

In a joint statement, the companies said the trade involves about 319,000 gross acres of undeveloped lease, permit and drilling reservation acreage in the Dawson Creek area of British Columbia in which Home has varying interests.

It also involves about 33,000 gross acres of conventional heavy-oil developed acreage and exploratory acreage in the Lloydminster area on the Alberta-Saskatchewan border in which Canadian Hunter has an interest.

In the trade, which involves a transfer of interests and no cash payments, Canadian Hunter acquires essentially all of Home's interest in the Dawson Creek acreage with the exception of rights to the deeper geological zones.

Home acquires Canadian Hunter's interest in the Lloydminster lands in all zones. The developed portion of these lands is currently producing about 1,400 barrels a day (1,100 net to Home Oil) of conventional heavy oil.

Jim Gray, executive vice-president of Canadian Hunter, said the acquisition of the Home acreage consolidates Hunter's extensive land holdings in the Elmworth Field area.

Home is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Consumers' Gas Co. of Toronto and Canadian Hunter is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Noranda Mines Ltd. of Toronto.

Provincial Court

Rifling a secretary's purse while visiting his bail supervisor resulted in a 19-year-old receiving a two-month jail sentence in Victoria provincial court Thursday.

Michael Harold Wright, of 1630 Cook, was sentenced by Judge William Ostler on charges of attempted theft under $200 and failing to appear in court.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said Wright had been sentenced Nov. 20 to 10 days in jail for forging a $1,500 cheque, and was released Nov. 26, when he went to the bail supervisor's office in the Law Courts building for a 1 p.m. appointment.

While he waited, Laughton said, a secretary went to the washroom, and Wright went behind a counter and was going through a purse when he was caught. Wright said he was looking for a match, but Laughton pointed out that a wallet inside the purse had been opened and a lighter in the purse remained untouched.

Defence lawyer Victor Simpson said his client was trying to figure what day it was and went behind the counter to look at a calendar. He then remembered he needed a match and went to the purse.

The failing to appear charge was for a Jan. 28 court date which Wright missed.

Ostler said the offence was inexcusable, and gave Wright two months on the attempted theft charge and an additional seven days on the second charge.

A 33-YEAR-OLD man who received a six-month jail term from Ostler on Jan. 22 for two counts of uttering forged bank money orders was given another five-month sentence Thursday for the same offence.

William Joseph Duggan pleaded guilty to uttering a forged Royal Bank money order in the amount of $462.43 on Jan. 7.

Laughton said the money order, in the amount of $2.43, was given to Duggan, who changed it to $462.43 and cashed it in Parksville.

AN EDMONTON man, 19-year-old Robert Andrew Rac, was handed a 14-day jail term by Ostler for obtaining food and drink by fraud last Friday night from the Golden Palace Restaurant, 866 Yates.

Court was informed Rac and a companion went to the restaurant, where they ate a meal valued at $9.55 and four triple Black Russians valued at another $31, and left without paying the bill.

Laughton said Rac was convicted of the same offence Jan. 22, 1980 in Kamloops, receiving a suspended sentence and probation.

Ostler placed Rac on four months' probation and ordered him to make restitution to the restaurant.

JAIL TERMS totalling seven months and fines totalling $500 were given to 22-year-old Daniel Joseph David Blissett, of 1279 Reynolds.

Blissett pleaded guilty to three counts of driving while under suspension and two counts of driving without a valid insurance policy.

Ostler was told the charges stemmed from incidents Nov. 23 and Dec. 22, 1978 and Dec. 31, 1979.

On each of the first two occasions, Laughton stated, Blissett gave officers a false name of Craig Martin and was released on an appearance notice before officers learned his real identity. On the last occasion, an off-duty policeman spotted Blissett walking to his vehicle and followed him until help arrived.

Blissett had previous convictions for driving while suspended on June 16, July 18, and Dec. 1, 1977, and was given a fine of $250 the first time, a jail term of five months for the second conviction, and a 23-day term on the third conviction. He was also convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 on April 12, 1977 in Nanaimo and fined $500.

Saying it was hard for him to recall "more defiant and contemnacious conduct," Ostler handed out consecutive sentences of one, two, and four months on the driving-while-suspended charges, and $250 fines for the no-valid-insurance charges.

JUDGE FRED GREEN, noting breath test readings of .35 and .31 and a previous impaired driving conviction, sentenced 40-year-old Joseph Stephen Hibsman, of no fixed address, to 14 days in jail for driving with a blood-alcohol reading over .08 Aug. 28.

Hibsman was stopped at about 3:30 p.m. by Victoria police in the 700-block Pandora after an RCMP officer had followed him from Esquimalt.

Hibsman was convicted of impaired driving in December, 1979, in Grand Prairie and fined $400.

JUDGE LORNE PEARCE handed out the maximum $2,000 fine for having care and control of a vehicle with a blood-alcohol reading over .08.

Pearce found 40-year-old Max Gerald Johner, of R.R. 6, Humpback Road, guilty following a trial Thursday. Readings obtained by Colwood RCMP on Sept. 18 were .21 and .20.

Johner had a conviction for the same offence July 26, 1976 in Victoria when he was fined $600, and was convicted May 1, 1977 in Victoria for refusing a breath test demand and fined $400.

Pearce also said he would recommend to the motor vehicles superintendent that Johner be suspended from driving for two years.

THE ACES®

IRA G. CORN, JR.

"The honest man takes pains, and then enjoys pleasures; the knave takes pleasures and then suffers pain." -- Ben Franklin.

Declarer played today's deceptive-looking game like a knave. He was quick to seek his pleasures, but all he found was pain.

Note North's choice of a single raise. With a hand worth only one constructive bid, it is better to raise the known five card suit than to complicate matters by bidding one spade.

Declarer ruffed the second diamond impulsively and then thought about his plan. He didn't know it at the time, but it was already too late for any plan to work.

Declarer played two high trumps and West's discard brought forth a problem. How was declarer to deal with the bad trump break?

There was no answer as declarer soon found out. He played his clubs, trying to knock out West's ace, but West merely ducked one round, grabbed the second and gave East a ruff by leading a third round.

Should declarer have drawn the trumps? That was even worse since the defenders would then cash all the diamonds when in with the ace of clubs.

The winning play is such a simple maneuver that it easily escapes attention. Instead of ruffing the second diamond, declarer should discard a losing spade. Now dummy's trumps guard against another diamond lead and declarer has time to deal with the bad trump break and the ace of clubs.

What you should know about stereos

Turntables —
There are three types of turntables; the totally manual models in which the user has to position the tone arm over the first groove, and lift it when the record is finished. The semi-automatic models that lift the arm when the side is finished. And the totally automatic, single play and mutiple play machines. The user just presses a button and the turntable plays the record, shuts off the motor, and returns the tone arm to its rest.

Headphones:
With headphones, you can listen to what you want, when you want, and as loud as you want. They have the advantage of bringing the music closer, allowing details to be heard more distinctly. In looking for good headphone performance, listen for a reasonably full bass with good tonal definition as well as smoothness from the mid range to the extreme highs.

Secret reports scathing on perils of Maggie

By JIM HUME
Colonist reporter

The Princess Marguerite could have sailed on the Victoria-Seattle run this summer, but only with potential disaster as a constant companion.

That was the grim message received by the government from two survey companies hired in June and July last year to report on the ship's electrical systems and the general condition of her hull and engines.

Both reports are still closely-guarded government secrets, although NDP opposition critics have on many occasions asked for their contents to be released.

Thursday, from non-government sources, the Colonist obtained copies of the reports presented to the government last year. One is from E. Edwardson and Co. Ltd., Vancouver.

Edwardson was responsible for the general survey of the Marguerite and Electric Power for all electrical systems.

The Edwardson report ends with the words "it should in no way be construed that the vessel is unfit for her present service."

It is a line calculated to bring hope to "save the Marguerite" supporters until placed in the cold context of the rest of Edwardson report. When placed in that context, the one hopeful line in the report means: "She could sail, she is still seaworthy but the dangers are many, the risks numerous."

They were risks the government decided it could no longer afford to take with 1,800 passengers on board.

The Edwardson report sounds its first warning of the dangers on the first page of its report.

"Thirty years old is an old saltwater passenger ship where the cost maintenance curve climbs sharply and the efficiency curve goes in the other direction. Nostalgic experiences are difficult barriers to break down, and very often end up in disaster because of their resistance to change."

The report goes on to say that "plate thinning is now obvious at several locations on the vessel . . .

". . . In the event that renewal of riveted plate work becomes necessary, one should bear in mind that riveters for ships are a thing of the past."

"The vessel's lifeboats appear to be of steel construction, and if so, have a very limited life due to their light plate scantlings when built.

"Piping in the vessel at this age must be constant source of trouble. As age progresses, piping can be a nightmare with no end in sight . . ."

Nightmare appeared to be the appropriate word to introduce the next section of the Edwardson hull report.

"The vessel's car deck, when fully loaded with cars, houses a great deal of gas which does not appear to clear sufficiently. The fitting of a further exhaust fan would mean the adding of more electrical load which is unacceptable with the vessel's present generating capacity . . .

"There is no reserve power on board."

Another section of the report states that "combustion sulphur fumes are strongly in evidence at boiler tops."

The Edwardson report also dealt with the economics of continuing to operate the Marguerite.

On the boilers, the report notes that there are "two stokeholds instead of one, this is reminiscent of bygone days and is a very expensive crew item."

On the turbines: "They would probably last another 30 or so years (but) thermal and general heat efficiency (is) extremely poor.

"And at the price of today's fuel, a luxury."

Generators: "The above would apply here also, only much more so, as the vessels two turbo-generators are more or less running non-stop for the complete season and (again) there is no reserve power on board."

The Marguerite, for an expenditure of between two and three million dollars, could have been kept going for a maximum of three to four years. That would have kept her to minimum "statutory regulations and class requirements," but would not have eliminated many of the hazards.

The first line in the Edwardson report's conclusions states: "It is our opinion that the ship should be viewed as obsolete—and extremely costly to operate."

Almost as a footnote the report notes, sadly, that "the present scrap value of the vessel if around $300,000. However, a possible sale might still yield $1 to $1.5 million."

The electrical report on the Marguerite carries a similar, if more technical message. It notes that while the electrical plant is "in apparent sound conditions despite (its) age . . . the probability of failure is approximately 50 per cent (at any time during the next) five years."

It adds that "consequently if a failure did occur, the service would be terminated."

The Electric Power Equipment report pays tribute for the excellent condition of the electrical system to the "diligence and experience, which will be very difficult to duplicate" of James Flaherty and his chief assistant. Flaherty and his chief assistant are due for retirement before the 1980 tourist season starts.

Most government officials approached refused comment on the two reports Thursday other than to ask where the Colonist had obtained them.

But one official, who asked for anonymity, said: "Now you know why the Marguerite isn't running this year, and maybe you can understand what we went through last year when faced with these reports bang in the middle of the tourist season.

"I can tell you we were asking for reports constantly, but we never stopped worrying. If she went out this year she would be a floating coffin."

And the cause of all the concern lies placidly tied up at her Belleville Street dock, awaiting her fate.

Late Thursday the Colonist received a tip that she had been sold to Vancouver interests to end her days as a floating restaurant-convention centre.

Government officials denied that rumor.

Menuhin confers with conductor Freeman at rehearsal for sellout concert

When Menuhin plays here sellout's a firm reality

By JIM GIBSON
Colonist reporter

It was possible, according to one Victoria Symphony board member, to have more than tripled your money on tickets for violinist Yehudi Menuhin.

At least one person left out in the cold Thursday night at the University Centre was offering $30 to hear one of the world's great violinists. There were others in the lobby with forlorn expressions who just couldn't believe that somehow there wouldn't be last-minute tickets for the concert, which reportedly sold out a week ago.

Inside, the auditorium was packed—including the choir seats encircling the orchestra from behind—for what was the first of the symphony's Mozart to Mendelssohn mini-series.

The symphony core had never before sounded as good as it did in the concert's first half, in works by Mozart, Schubert and Vorsiek. The program lent itself to the big rich sound the orchestra now excels at under conductor Paul Freeman. It was a wonderful teaser for the rest of the series that lacks the box office draw of a Menhuin.

For all the orchestra's excellence and sympathetic playing, the crowd saved its standing ovation for Menuhin, who played Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto with flashes of brilliance. It was the same concerto that the 63-year-old violinist played as a seven-year-old soloist in his debut with the San Francisco Orchestra that launched one of the great musical careers of the century.

He doesn't play the Mendelssohn often nowadays, the violinist said in a Wednesday interview that found him far more youthful looking than the ashen figure on stage Thursday.

"There are certain works that I have carried through my life," said Menhuin, adding it was refreshing to return to the Mendelssohn after playing so many other works.

The University Centre crowd wasn't going to let Menuhin go without an encore. He obliged three times with excerpts from Bach Partitas.

Saanich police budget climbs to $4.4 million

A record $4.4-million budget, a 15.3 per cent increase over last year, has been approved by Saanich police board.

Salaries account for 91 per cent of the bumper budget.

The 42-page budget, adopted at a marathon seven-hour meeting, is expected to come under close scrutiny by a council anxious to hold the tax line when it is formally presented later this month.

"I'm satisfied there's no fat in the budget," board chairman Mayor Mel Couvelier said.

"It's just a case of the inflationary wage and price spiral. I'm sure there's no area where council will be able to make cuts."

Couvelier said council could send the budget back to the board for a second look. "But I'm completely satisfied we made all the cuts we could."

The budget has no provision for any new officers to be hired but does contain an eight per cent pay hike.

"If the Vancouver police settle for more than eight per cent, then we're in deep trouble," Couvelier told the board.

Under terms of the existing three-year contract effective Jan. 1, 1978, Saanich police officers obtain parity with their Lqwer Mainland counterparts this June.

The capital portion of the budget, trimmed by $20,150 from a request of $81,225, represents a 40 per cent hike over the 1979 budget.

Total combined police expenditures this year (operating and capital) are increased $611,500 or 15.6 per cent—$4,532,300 compared with $3.9 million last year.

The board was able to chop only $22,300 from the operating section. This was accomplished by cutting $4,000 from $21,000 proposed for training and staff development, $7,800 from a contingency fund for replacement of a new police cruiser in the event of an accident, and $5,900 from vehicle operating estimates.

Scuba and underwater diving equipment and a word processing unit were also axed.

Clothing allowance this year is down $3,000 from the $49,000 budgeted last year. It includes $14,000 for the 28 plainclothes officers; cleaning and maintenance allowance of $8,437 for 79 officers; 182 pairs of uniform trousers, $8,000; shirts, $4,-893; shoes, $3,690; gloves, $445.

In addition, clothing allowance for the chief, his deputy and four inspectors amounts to $2,904, with $3,600 in the budget for cleaning and maintenance allowance.

The budget includes $4,500 for relocation of the youth and community services division in the health services building adjacent to Saanich municipal hall.

Oak Bay Lodge moves on expansion program

A $1 million expansion program for Oak Bay Lodge will double the lodge's intermediate-care capacity, taking it to 300 beds, the lodge's board of directors said Thursday.

The renovation project will go to tender in three months, after design work has been completed by Wagg & Hambleton, Victoria architects.

The project has been given a high priority by health planners because of an acute shortage of intermediate-care beds in the region.

In addition to making room for more residents, the renovation project will improve fire detection and alarm systems, improve dining and kitchen facilities, and update the elevator.

A separate $17,000 project began this week to add a day care program to the lodge. The program, which will be completed in two weeks, will help patients living at home to become more active and less dependent.

The lodge, operated by the Glendale Lodge Society, will also improve its hotel facilities for 74 residents.

Labor board dismisses Saanich union shift try

A union switch bid by 23 Saanich employees has been dismissed by the Labor Relations Board.

The civilian employees of the police department applied last year to break away from the Canadian Union of Public Employees and join the Saanich Police Association.

The civilians do not have "a sufficient community of interest with the police officers in the bargaining unit represented by the association to justify their inclusion in that unit," the board said in a ruling handed down Thursday.

The decision had been delayed several weeks because a number of complex legal issues were raised during submissions by the association and the municipality.

The board said it would be inappropriate to address these questions which were, in effect, collateral to the central issue.

One of the key questions raised was whether Saanich or the police board was the employer.

The employees had been considered part of the municipal employees unit for many years and had been represented by CUPE since 1968. In the past, when bargaining issues had been raised which directly affected the civilian employees of the department, CUPE had proven a responsible and flexible bargaining agent, the board said.

"This panel is reluctant to uspet a bargaining relationship which has functioned well over a period of years, and the panel is satisfied the fundamental coherence of the association's present bargaining unit will be best served by not including these employees."

Fun vehicle parking rapped

ALDERMAN ASKS CITY FOR STUDY

Even North Battleford has better parking facilities for recreational vehicles than Victoria, according to Ald. Frank Carson.

And with a view to improving that score, city council's tourism committee Thursday asked city manager James Bramley to prepare a report on where parking facilities for recreational vehicles could be provided.

The issue was raised by the Dogwood Trailer Club of B.C.

In a letter to city council, the club said accommodation for recreational vehicles was difficult to find in the Victoria area.

"At present, it isn't uncommon for a recreational vehicle owner to arrive via the Coho from Port Angeles, or from the mainland via Swartz Bay, to commence looking for a place to stay for the night and being directed to the highway, only to be confronted with "no-vacancy" signs at the limited number of commercial trailer parks adjacent to our city," the letter said.

Charles Cameron, a member of the club's executive, attended the committee meeting and told aldermen that between 400 and 500 recreational vehicles arrived in Victoria every day during the tourist season.

He said the entire business community would benefit from proper facilities for these vehicles.

Contrary to popular opinion, recreational vehicle owners were good spenders, leaving about $40 a day behind.

He said facilities would be easy to install at a comparatively low cost.

The club's call for more recreational vehicle facilities was endorsed by the Victoria Downtown Business Association which told the committee in a letter that the association was "thoroughly aware of the shortage of the in-town or near-town R.V. accommodation."

Robbins Parking Service Ltd. said in a letter the company would be prepared to operate any recreational vehicle parking lots installed by the city.

The fee would be 12 per cent of the gross revenue, the letter said.

Parkade reaps healthy profit

Parkades in Victoria have been traditional revenue producers, and the Broughton Street parkade is no exception.

Net profit from the parkade last year was nearly $150,000, of which the city of Victoria received $48,000 and the B.C. Buildings Corp. $101,000.

The city receives a share of the profits because it owned part of the property on which the parkade and the provincial government building above it were built.

Candidates slam ads

Deplorable and revolting were words used Thursday to describe advertisements being run by the three major parties in the Feb. 18 federal election.

Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal candidate Gerry Kristianson told 400 enthusiastic Mount Douglas senior high school students the ads were "irresponsible" and "distasteful."

All three parties must share blame for advertisements and commercials which attacked the leaders of each party, he said.

"I think it extremely bad to let political advertising fall into the hands of advertising agencies which attempt to sell politicians like bars of soap or deodorants," he said.

"I find the advertising in this campaign deplorable and revolting."

Progressive Conservative inclumbent Donald Munro said he had spoken to party headquarters in Ottawa and told them "take these disgraceful ads off our television screens."

He said in an interview following the all-candidates meeting that he complained "pretty vigorously" to party brass. "They are getting similar complaints from candidates across Canada," he added.

New Democratic Party candidate Robert Cameron, librarian at Mount Douglas, told his young audience that Canada should attempt to obtain guarantees from the United States over tanker traffic.

"We should attach strings to the sale of natural gas to our neighbors; tell them we want guarantees oil tankers will pose no threat to our waters."

Cameron said PetroCan should be made the sole importer of oil and sole developer of the tar sands.

"It's no use talking about fiscal responsibility or energy planning unless we stop the sellout of our resources," he said.

Kristianson agreed, saying "this part of the world can't afford to have tankers travelling along the coast."

He suggested residents of B.C. and Washington state "get together" and tell their leaders they would not stand for oil pollution. Such a non-partisan approach would be successful, he added.

Child psychiatrist Dr. Philip Ney called for a return to moral and spiritual values "because life to many people is becoming less valuable."

There had been a serious deterioration in respect for human life, especially children and the unborn, he said.

All four candidates agreed it was "inappropriate" for young people to be given a criminal record for possession of marijuana, but all said the law should come down heavily against drug traffickers.

Canada's puck medal chance hinges on game with Finns

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (CP) — Canada returns to Olympic hockey after a 12-year hiatus Tuesday, and while coach Tom Watt is predicting a medal-winning performance, the very fact Canada is icing a team at the 1980 Winter Games provides the former University of Toronto mentor with a great deal of satisfaction.

"There's no question about it, we're here to win a medal, and if we don't, we're going to be disappointed," Watt said in a recent interview.

"But the most important thing, whether we do well or not, is that we're back in Olympic hockey and it gives every young Canadian something to shoot at other than the National Hockey League."

The last time Canada participated in Olympic hockey was at Grenoble, France, in 1968. The team was crushed 5-0 by the Soviet Union in the final game, and although it still managed to win the bronze medal, its performance was hard to stomach for a Canadian public weaned on hockey, and the pullout followed.

Watt, who shares the coaching duties with Clare Drake and Lorne Davis, realizes that if Canada is to win a bronze medal — the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia are strong favorites to capture the top two prizes — the Calgary-based squad must master the larger international-size ice surface, which is 14 feet wider than the conventional North American rink.

"The big ice surface is very important because at home in Calgary, we played just great," he said. "We were 12-2-1 and didn't lose an international game on the small surface. But we haven't been as good, in terms of wins, on the bigger surfaces."

The Olympic team, minus eight players who took part in the Izvestia tournament in Moscow as part of a Canada Selects squad, lost all four games at a pre-Olympic tournament here in December on the international-size rink. Then, in January, they dropped 6-3 and 5-1 decisions to the Moscow Selects and defeated the Japanese national team 1-0 during a series of games in Japan.

But Watt feels the additional exposure to the big ice surface in Japan was a great help and believes the youthful squad, which averages under 22 years of age and is comprised almost exclusively of collegiate and junior players, is peaking at just the right time.

Canada's road toward a medal is a somewhat smoother one than that faced by such countries as Sweden and the United States. The 12 countries in the tournament have been divided into two pools. Each team will play the other five clubs in its division once, with the top two in each pool advancing to the medal round.

Canada's preliminary-round opponents will be the Soviet Union, Finland, Poland, Japan and the Netherlands, while the other division is comprised of Czechoslovakia, Sweden, the United States, West Germany, Norway and Romania.

Therefore, if form charts mean anything, Canada's chance at a medal would appear to hinge on its Feb. 15 game with Finland.

"Our key game is against Finland," agrees Watt. "They have an excellent team, they finished second at Izvestia and they have scouted us extensively because they also know it's the key game for them."

The squad currently boasts 24 members, three over the Olympic limit. Each country must file its lineup 12 hours prior to its opening game and Watt promises to wait until the last minute.

"We have to name 20 players and the 21st player is a third goaltender. He can only play in the case of an injury to one of the other goaltenders and then the one he replaces cannot return to competition."

Watt harbors no doubt that the Canadian team is prepared, both mentally and physically.

"The cohesion here is just great. After all, everybody gave up a lot, they've trained hard. We're fit.

"There's no team in Lake Placid, or anywhere in the world, that's going to outskate us. Tactically, we're well prepared. We've seen a lot of the teams that we're going to play and we know the adjustments we'll have to make."

If the pre-Olympic tournament in December was any indication, the one big adjustment needed is to find the scoring touch. Despite outshooting their opposition 109-100, the Canadians were outscored 20-5 in the four tournament games.

"If we have one worry, it's that we've come up a little cold around the net on certain occasions," says Watt. "That will have to change."

Lever dealt to Flames

VANCOUVER — Vancouver Canucks have traded captain Don Lever, an eight-year veteran of the National Hockey League club, and winger Brad Smith to Atlanta Flames.

In return, the Canucks will get centre Ivan Boldirev and leftwinger Darcy Rota. They will join the Canucks for their next game, Saturday against the Canadiens in Montreal.

The trade was announced Thursday after the Canucks had scored a 4-1 win over Philadelphia Flyers.

Lever, 27, third among Canucks' scorers with 21 goals and 17 assists this season, joined the club for the 1972-73 campaign. He was a No. 1 junior draft pick from the Niagara Falls Flyers.

In his seven-plus seasons with Vancouver, Lever scored 186 goals.

Smith, nearly 22, has spent the last two seasons, his first two in pro hockey, shuttling between the Canucks and their Central Hockey League affiliate in Dallas. He was a fith-round draft choice in 1978.

Rota, 27, was born in Vancouver but grew up in Prince George. He was chosen in the draft's first round by Chicago Black Hawks, playing his first season in 1973-74 after a standout junior career with Edmonton Oil Kings.

He was traded to Atlanta with Boldirev and Phil Russell for Tom Lysiak, Pat Ribble, Harold Phillipoff — also now Canuck property — Greg Fox and Miles Zaharko last March.

His best year for Chicago was 1976-77 when he scored 24 goals and drew 22 assists. He had 10 goals and eight assists in 44 games for the Flames.

How do you figure the Vancouver Canucks?

They go winless in 11 straight games. They get one of a possible 12 points in a six-game home stand and lose at home to Colorado Rockies.

But then they go on the road and win two of their first three games and beat the No. 1 team in the National Hockey League before one of the most vocally partisan crowds anywhere.

Goalkeeper Gary Bromley made his record 2-0 since being recalled from the minors as the Canucks upset the Philadelphia Flyers 4-1 before a crowd of 17,077 Thursday at the Spectrum.

In other games: Buffalo Sabres padded their Vezina Trophy lead with a 9-0 shutout of visiting Pittsburgh Penguins; Boston Bruins outgunned Toronto Maple Leafs 8-6 at Boston; Montreal Canadiens edged Colorado 4-3 at the Forum; and New York Islanders defeated visiting Los Angeles Kings 4-1.

The Canucks win over the Flyers rates as thebiggest upset of the season.

The Flyers went into the game with a 35-3-13 record, the best in the league, and they were unbeaten at home this season. The Canucks were 16-28-8 and had won only two of their last 15 games.

The Flyers, who already set a record this season by going unbeaten in 35 straight games, were one game away from tying the league record for going unbeaten at home. Montreal went unbeaten in 28 home games between Dec. 18, 1977 and Feb. 23, 1978. Philadelphia was unbeaten in 26 home games this season and had won its final league game of last season.

Their last league loss at the Spectrum was April 5 last year when they were edged 3-1 by the Islanders.

Both of the Canucks previous wins in 1980 came on the road. They beat Colorado a month ago and opened the current three-game road trip with a 5-4 win over Minnesota North Stars.

They lost 3-0 at Buffalo but because of the all-star break had three days rest — except all-star pickup Lars Lindgren — before facing the Flyers.

Bromley, who had been playing for Dallas of the Central League since the start of the season, was in the nets against Minnesota and kicked out 26 shots against the Flyers.

He played 38 games for the Canucks last season but Glen Hanlon won the No. 1 job this year and Bromley lost to Curt Ridley in the battle for backup honors.

Bromley was at his best in the second and the third periods when the Flyers held a 20-14 edge in shots.

Rick Vaive, the Canucks No. 1 draft choice in 1979, lived up to his press clippings for a change.

Stan Smyl put the Canucks ahead 1-0 with a powerplay goal late in the first period and Vaive made it 2-0 with a slapshot at 12:45 of the second period.

Vaive, a six-foot, 180 pound rightwinger, played as an underage for Birmingham Bulls of the World Hockey Association last year and scored 26 goals, picked up 33 assists and took 248 minutes in penalties.

In his first 42 games for Vancouver he had only 10 goals, 18 assists and 98 minutes in penalties.

Rick MacLeish scored a shorthanded goal at 19:39 of the second period to make it 2-1 and the Flyers had the pressure on early in the final frame.

But Bromley held the fort and Thomas Gradin made it 3-1 at 8:36 of the third. Vaive put the game away with an empty-net goal at 19:16.

Phil Myre, who has been in goal for all four Philadelphia losses this season, stopped only 16 shots.

At Buffalo, Don Edwards stopped 25 shots as the Sabres posted their second straight shutout. Bob Sauve did the honors in the 3-0 win over the Canucks.

The Sabres have now lead the Vezina chase with 141 goals allowed in 54 games for a 2.61 goals-against-average while the Flyers are next with 152 goals in 52 games for a 2.92 average.

Boston's Vezina hopes suffered a setback as Gerry Cheevers gave up the six goals to Toronto. Boston has given up 158 goals in 53 games for 2.98 average.

Cougars overpower Bruins

Victoria Cougars and Brandon Wheat Kings tuned up for a Saturday meeting with similar victories Thursday.

Western Division teams were the victims in both cases as the Cougars downed last-place New Westminster Bruins 6-2 in a Western Hockey League game at New Westminster and the Wheat Kings defeated the Breakers by the same score at Seattle.

The Cougars and Wheat Kings play 8:30 p.m. Saturday at Memorial Arena. It will be the fourth and final meeting of the clubs in league play this season and although the Cougars hold a 2-1 edge they lost the last encounter 5-4 in overtime at Brandon.

The Wheat Kings have been one of the most improved teams in the Eastern Division in recent weeks.

The defending champions got off to a poor start and were struggling most of the season but have been winning more than they've been losing since acquiring strong man Boris Fistric from New Westminster Bruins.

The win over Seattle put them in a three-way tie for fourth place in the East with Lethbridge Broncos and Billings Bighorns.

Victory moved the Cougars to within a point of first-place Portland Winter Hawks in the West while the loss dropped the Bruins closer to mathematical elimination from the playoffs. Cougars still enjoy two games in hand over the Winter Hawks.

Bruins and Cougars played to a scoreless draw in the first period, Bob Jansch made it 1-0 at 3:14 of the second and Greg Adams put the Cougars ahead 2-0 at 11:28.

Andy Ristau got the Bruins close with a powerplay goal at 16:37 of the second but the Cougars exploded with goals 16 seconds apart early in the third period. Adams scored his 44th goal of the season at 5:39 and Bud McCarthy scored at 5:55.

Bob Smith and Daryl Coldwell also scored for the Cougars while Randy Wickware got the other New Westminster goal.

Buckaroos romp

Western Homes Buckaroos handed PPCLI Pats their second thumping in as many nights Thursday.

Wayne Proceviat, a former junior "B" scoring champion, hit for five goals as the Buckaroos trounced the Pats 12-5 in a South Island Big Six Hockey League game at George Pearkes Arena.

Esquimalt Maple Leafs had shelled the winless Pats 15-1 Wednesday.

Doug Burger scored twice for the Bucks and Gord Stutridge, Norm Allen, Peter White, Bill Pettinger and Jerome Lidster scored once each while Doug Palmer scored three times for the Pats and Joe Wiseman and Dan Lorenschiet scored once each.

Dave Waight made 17 stops in the Bucks goal and Ralph Wilson made 28 saves for the Pats.

In a late game at Pearkes, Victoria Athletics handled Juan de Fuca Merchants 4-1.

John Entzminger scored two goals and Jim Entzminger added another, as did Brian Preston for the winners. Steve Berrie notched the Merchants' goal.

Playoffs first for Vikettes, claims coach

By TOM KEYSER

Most coaches never admit casting their thoughts beyond the next game. But Kathy Shields is different.

With the Canada West women's basketball conference title all but tucked in her hip pocket, the second-year University of Victoria Vikettes coach will, in unguarded moments, concede she's plotting strategy for the conference playoffs.

Shields' foresight stops short of the nationals. She insists it's first things first.

That means ensuring her unbeaten ballplayers don't get sloppy this weekend, when Lethbridge Pronghorns arrive at McKinnon Gym for games tonight and Saturday. Their male counterparts engage Victoria Vikings in a men's doubleheader both nights.

Shields is willing to share her reflections on a local theory which contends Vikettes inevitably collapse in the nationals. During their phenomenal 60-0, three-year CWUAA undefeated streak, Vikettes were shot down each time at the Canadian tournament.

Then last year, after Shields replaced Mike Gallo, Vikettes placed second in conference but, as a wild-card entry, endured all the way to the final.

Now, with the team 29-0, a trip to the CIAU tournament in Halifax next month seems inevitable.

Will they win it? Or won't they?

"I don't really want to look past the playoffs," Shields said prior to Wednesday's practice.

"But I don't think people understand how tough it is to win the national championship. Some people don't realize how many great teams we have in Canada.

"It's not fair to criticize UVic for not winning."

Top-ranked Vikettes must be wary of No. 2 Bishop's, No. 3 Dalhousie (host team for the nationals) and Guelph, ranked fourth in the CIAU.

"I do think we'll be there, if not as conference champs then as a wild card. With all due respect, I think we're the best in the west."

At 14-0 in-conference, Vikettes nearest competition is fifth-ranked Calgary Dinnies, 10-4. UVic has beaten Dinnies twice here and has another two games in Calgary.

The regular-season champs play host to the best-of-three conference playoffs.

Barring a total collapse, a post-season berth is assured.

The difference between this team and last year's is simple: Experience. The return of Carol Turney-Loos, who has resumed her role as conference scoring leader, has provided stability and inspiration — not to mention an abundance of points.

Luanne Hebb, another national team-member, and 19-year-old Sandi Lewis, a rebounding whiz who played for Canadian senior champion Victoria Home Lumber last season, rounds out the Vikettes' inner core of strength.

In addition, Shields' neophytes of last season are rounding into form. Sophomore Tracy McAra, twice an all-star in Christmas tournaments, has developed into her coach's idea of one of the quickest guards in Canada.

HOOPLA — Vancouver Kirbys, a senior 'A' squad at McKinnon Gym Sunday at 2 p.m., represent perhaps the most serious threat to Vikettes' win streak. . .Viking guard Ian Hyde-Lay, the cast off his ankle, will dress tonight and may see action. . .At 12-0, Vikings are in the stratosphere of the men's division. But Lethbridge coach Ken Olynyk was Ken Shields' assistant last season and knows the UVic system. According to Calgary's Gary Howard, Pronghorns, who upset UVic once last year, are 45 per cent improved. . .Perry Mirkovich of Lethbridge leads CWUAA with a 23.5 scoring average.

Newnham back

The return of Jack Newnham to his old turf and the appearance of a Seattle entry will highlight the opening of the third annual Lansdowne Midget Boys' Basketball Tournament this weekend.

The five-team competition starts 4 p.m. today at Lansdowne Junior High School and continues with games starting at 9 a.m. Saturday.

Newnham coached for several years at Lansdowne and was largely responsible for making that school's basketball program one of the best in the province.

He moved to the Mainland last year and returns for the tournament as coach of North Surrey.

Visiting from Washington will be Richmond Highlands, current leaders of the North Seattle Midget League.

Joining Lansdowne on the Victoria side are Fairburn and Arbutus.

ALL STEELHEAD RIVERS WILL BE CLOSED to steelhead fishing on Vancouver Island, effective immediately and until March 31, except for a catch and release fishery, regional biologist George Reid announced Thursday.

Only exceptions will be hatchery rivers like the Big Qualicum and Campbell-Quinsam and to a lesser extent, Little Qualicum, Stamp and Salmon Rivers, where anglers will be allowed to keep the adipose fin-clipped hatchery steelhead they catch. Otherwise anglers may fish for, but must release all steelhead they catch.

Reason for the sudden closure is an alarming shortage of steelhead in both Washington State and Vancouver Island streams this winter. Vancouver Island provincial biologists and technicians swimming the river for steelhead counts have found very few steelhead. So far they have no explanations for the low returns, but Washington is in a better position than British Columbia because it has an advanced steelhead hatchery program, whereas British Columbia has just entered the hatchery field.

"We want to protect the early spawnings steelhead — the December, January and February fish," Reid said.

On rivers like the Englishman which provincial authorities swam in January they counted only eight to 15 steelhead, where they would have expected to see 100.

On the bright side, British Columbia is just entering the steelhead hatchery field through the Salmonid Enhancement Program, with steelhead being produced at Quinsam hatchery, Big Qualicum hatchery and Robertson Creek hatchery, as well as in incubation boxes on the Goldstream. Returns so far this year to the Quinsam look encouraging.

This writer has no quarrel with the closure of steelhead rivers if the populations are in desperate shape. I do object to the CATCH and RELEASE program. If fish stocks need protection, give them full protection and none of this barbaric catch and release nonsense for a few elitists.

MOST EXCITING FISHING IN VICTORIA continues to be in Finlayson Arm, between Goldstream Island and Goldstream Flats, where anglers are still catching limits of 10 and 12-pound, some bigger, chinook salmon.

Anglers have been casting from the Halls Boathouse docks, but the Halls have had to stop public access on weekends because so many anglers showed up after our last mention of the dockside fishing.

But anglers are working the waters by boat between the dock fingers and picking up salmon.

And something new has started for this end of the Island. Some anglers have shown up for strip casting with fly rods and eight-pound-test line. They have been losing as many of the fish as they land, but it is certainly elitist-type fishing.

Trollers using strip, minnows and small spoons have been clicking in the more open waters.

The water around the docks has been thick with three to five-inch migrating herring, but their normal pattern would indicate they will be moving out shortly, but before they go they will hang around Goldstream Island.

The herring are also thick in Brentwood-Indian Bay waters between Sluggett and Henderson Points where anglers have been getting good-sized chinooks.

Shore fishing from Ten Mile Point has dropped off a little, but about 15 anglers a day are managing to beach about one small fish each a day.

Becher Bay and Pedder Bay anglers have been averaging two fish a boat, with an eight-pound average. Fishing from Pedder Bay, Al and Glen Cedar landed a 13-pounder, an 11-pounder, a seven pounder and filled the rest of their limit with smaller fish on Monday in the Church Rock-Whirl Bay waters. Brian Waddell and Andy Alepsio also limited. The Pedder Bay Winter Salmon Festival ends Sunday.

Victoria winter chinook fishing has slowed a little and catches have been mostly small fish. Killer whales in great numbers showed at Constance Bank at the weekend.

Nanaimo area winter chinook fishing has been excellent, very deep, and bigger fish, from five to 15 pounds. There are quite a few squid in the waters and hootchies work well.

At Campbell River the herring are starting to show and winter chinook fishing is picking up.

SIDNEY ANGLERS' ASSOCIATION will host a one-day salmon derby Sunday, dawn until 2 p.m., open to members and non-members.

As a change of pace top prize will be a hidden weight draw prize made from all entries. Remaining seven prizes will be awarded according to size of fish caught.

Weigh-in and presentations are scheduled for 2 p.m. at Tulista Park, next to the Anacortes ferry terminal at Sidney.

Tickets are $5 for senior and $3 for juniors and are available at Harvey's Sporting Goods and Dave's Chevron in Sidney.

The Sidney Club will hold its general meeting Monday, 7:30 p.m. in the banquet room of the Sidney Hotel.

VICTORIA CANOE CLUB MEMBERS will meet Sunday at Cadboro Bay's Gyro Park at 10:30 a.m. for some paddling around the Cadboro Bay and Ten Mile Point areas.

On Feb. 17 some of the experienced canoers will run the Cowichan River from the Bible Camp area in the Riverbottom. Non-river runners will take to Elk Lake, which they expect will be free of water skiers at this time of year.

Rowers dominate finals for athletes

Maybe this year the rowers will get their dinner and a winner too.

The Victoria athlete and team of the year awards have been presented annually at the Greater Victoria Sports Celebrity dinner since 1968 and in that time the 36 winners have represented 13 sports. Rowing hasn't been one of them.

But Victoria rowers had a big year in 1979 and will be strongly represented at the 13th annual dinner Monday, March 17th at the Empress Hotel.

Victoria City Rowing Club was edged out by Victoria Budgets (fastball), Victoria Shamrocks (lacrosse) and Victoria West (soccer) in team of the year finalists announced several weeks ago but did place four members among athlete of the year finalists.

Janice Mason and Lisa Roy of VCRC are finalists in voting for the female athlete award along with Carol Turney-Loos of the University of Victoria Vikettes basketball team and Jan Crook of the Canadian women's field hockey team.

Representing the male rowers are Bruce Ford and Patrick Walter of VCRC. They're up against goalkeeper Larry Smeltzer of the Shamrocks and world class gymnast Philip Delesalle.

Ford and Walter made the finals of team-of-the-year voting last year but a change in policy by the dinner selection committee has resulted in them and Mason and Roy being co-entrants for the individual awards.

Mason and Roy won all but three of their pairs races in 1979 and lost only once to a Canadian pair.

They won the Canadian closed and open doubles championships and finished 10th in the world championships. Roy teamed with Cheryl Mason to win the doubles at the Canadian Henley and Janice Mason won the singles.

Turney-Loos, a 24-year-old UVic student, played on the Canadian national team for the eighth straight year. She led the team in scoring when it won a bronze medal at the Pan-American Games in Puerto Rico and was the leading scorer over-all when Canada won a bronze medal at the World University Games in Mexico.

At the midway point in he Canada West University season, Turney-Loos led the scoring with 156 points in six games for a 26-point per-game average. She was shooting 56.6 percent from the floor and 84.8 percent from the free-throw line.

Crook, a 23-year-old UVic student and a member of the national women's field hockey team for six years, led B.C. to the Canadian championship and then helped Canada to a ninth place, its best showing ever in the world championship.

A sweeper (fullback) Crook was the anchor of Canada's impressive defence. Canada lost only 2-1 to world champion Holland and 2-0 to runner-up Germany.

Other outstanding candidates beaten out in the final voting were tennis player Nina Bland and track and field stars Debbie Campbell and Debbie Scott, the winner in 1976 and 1977.

Ford and Walter won the pairs gold medal in the Pan-American Games and won the Canadian and U.S. championships and finished eighth in the world championships.

Smeltzer backstopped the Shamrocks to the Western Lacrosse Association league and playoff championship and to their first Mann Cup (Canadian championship) in 22 years.

He had by far the lowest goals-against-average in the WLA and was named most valuable player in the Mann Cup playoffs.

Delesalle, the male athlete for the years 1976 and 1978, missed a good portion of the season because of a leg injury but came on at the end of the year to finish 12th over-all in the world championships, the best showing ever by a Canadian.

Edged out in the voting were Budget third baseman John Green, pro golfer Jim Rutledge and Robbie Parris of the UVic Viking basketball team.

Parseghian elected to Hall of Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — Ara Parseghian, whose teams won more games than any Notre Dame coach except Knute Rockne, has been elected to the National Football Foundation's College Football Hall of Fame, it was announced Thursday.

Parseghian compiled a record of 170-58-6 in 24 seasons as head coach at Miami of Ohio, Northwestern and Notre Dame, including 95-17-4 in 11 years with the Fighting Irish. He will be officially inducted at the foundation's annual awards dinner Dec. 9 along with 11 previously named players.

Parseghian, a star halfback at Miami, played pro ball with the National Football League's Cleveland Browns, then returned to his alma mater, first as an assistant to Woody Hayes. In 1951 he became the team's head coach and, in four seasons, had a record of 39-6-1.

He spent the next eight years at Northwestern, where his 36-35-1 record included four consecutive triumphs over Notre Dame during 1959-62.

He coached at Notre Dame from 1964 to 1974, the 95 victories falling just 10 short of the number Rockne amassed in 13 years. Parseghian's Notre Dame teams won national championships in 1966 and 1973 and finished in the Top 10 eight times.

Meanwhile, Lynn Swann, whose leaping, graceful catches as a Pittsburgh Steelers' wide receiver have made him one of football's premier players, now is a trustee of the city's ballet company.

"He was a likely candidate because of his dance background," said Billie Easton, Pittsburgh Ballet Theater spokeswoman.

Swann, a 6-foot, 180-pounder, studied dance for 14 years including two years of ballet and has attributed his agility on the field to that training.

And Cleveland traded two defensive linemen to New England Patriots on Thursday for two draft choices.

Tackle Earnie Price went to the Patriots for a 10th-round draft choice in 1981, while defensive end Mike St. Clair was traded for New England's sixth-round selection in this year's draft.

New boss

BELFAST (Reuter) — Billy Bingham was appointed manager of the Northern Ireland soccer team on Thursday, succeeding Danny Blanchflower.

Silvia captures lead

MIAMI (AP) — Silvia Bertolaccini bogeyed two of the final three holes but managed to finish with a three-under-par 69 and a one-shot lead Thursday after the first round of a $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Bertolaccini, a native of Argentina and a resident of Pompano Beach, Fla., played in the morning and posted the day's best round early. It stood up the rest of the day.

She takes her lead over five players into today's second round of the second stop on the 1980 LPGA tour.

Tied at two-under-par 70 were Jane Blalock, Debbie Massey, JoAnn Washam, Sandra Spuzich and Joyce Kazmierski. Four players, headed by defending United States Open champion Jerilyn Britz, finished at one-under-par 71. Defending champion Amy Alcott was one-over at 73 on the par-72, 6,211-yard Turnberry Isle course.

Nancy Lopez was two-under after six holes but bogeyed four consecutive holes starting at No. 8 and finished at five-over-par 77.

"I'm very happy with my under par round," said Bertolaccini, who was 13th on the money list in 1979. "Today, every time I had a chance for a birdie I made it. I like to think I'm a front-runner but it's still very early."

In windy and cool conditions, she posted six birdies and three bogeys. She made only two pars on the final nine holes.

Bertolaccini went out in 34, scoring birdies on No. 2 and 5. She played the backside as if she was on a roller coaster. She birdied No. 10, 12, 14 and 17 while getting bogeys on No. 13, 16 and 18.

Kazmierski, playing in the afternoon, blew a share of the lead with a bogey at the par-five 485-yard 18th hole.

"I would have liked to have had a share of the lead," she said. "But being one shot back after the first round is good."

The tournament, which is sponsored by Elizabeth Arden, ends Sunday.

Sandra Post, a native of Oakville, Ont., was six strokes off the pace with a 75. Cathy Sherk of Port Colborne, Ont., had a 76.

"TALKS ABOUT CARS"
I've just recently made a change, a change to Reg Midgley and AMC! and what a surprise! For the past few years I had noticed the quality in the AMC compact Concords and sub-compact Spirits, but now with the opportunity to closely inspect these cars I believe they are second to none in quality and value. Proven 6-cyl. and 4-cyl. engines available in both models to give you the economy needed under today's conditions. I am driving a beautiful 1980 Concord 'DL' finished in smoke grey. This 2-door compact sedan is powered by the 6-cyl. engine and well equipped with the std. 'DL' equipment and options. List price $7825. Reg has authorized the sale of this demo to the first reasonable offer. Or on approval you can lease at just $177.08 per mo. For value, it's Reg Midgley and AMC.

Burns continues winning pace

HONOLULU (AP) — George Burns came to the Waialae Country Club expecting to absorb a golf lesson and gave one instead.

Burns, 30, fired a seven-under-par 65 to tie Leonard Thompson for the first-round lead in the 72-hole, $325,000 Hawaiian Open golf tournament Thursday, Winner of the Bing Crosby event last Sunday, Burns was paired with money-winning king Tom Watson and Jerry Pate, former United States Open champion.

"I'll take notes on what they do and learn something," he said.

He did learn how to be calm in the face of adversity when Watson's driver broke midway through the round.

"That would have shaken me," Burns said, "but he came on to birdie the hole."

Watson, who won a record $462,636 last year, asked his father to get a replacement driver from the clubhouse and carried on for a 67.

Pate finished his round with an even-par 72. Defending champion Hubert Green, who won the Hawaiian in both 1978 and 1979, the latter with a record 267, suffered a duffer's fate on the seventh hole.

His tee shot on the 166-yard, par-three went into the trap and it took him four shots to get out. He shot a 39 for the first nine and a 76 for the round.

Tied with Watson at 67 were Ed Sneed, Don Pooley, Chi Chi Rodriguez, John Schroeder and Peter Oosterhuis. At 68 were Frank Conner, Bill Kratzert, Stuart Reese, John Fought, Lance Suzuki, Ben Crenshaw, Jay Haas and Larry Nelson.

Tradewinds increased by afternoon and the greens were scuffed. Arnold Palmer carded a 71 during that time.

Thompson played like Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. His nines were 35-30, playing the second nine first.

Starting on the 10th hole, Thompson dropped a 12-foot putt for a birdie. After parring No. 11, he birdied the next five with putts ranking from six to 18 feet.

Burns had nines of 33-32, with eight birdies and one bogey over the 7,234-yard Waialae course, par 36-36.

"I still feel like I'm walking on a cloud," said Burns. "I did learn how competitive Tom Watson is. He doesn't let a bad shot get him down."

Burns earned $54,000 for winning the Crosby and the first prize here is $58,500.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby had a 39 on the front nine and a 31 on the back for a 70. Dan Halldorson of Brandon fired a 71 and Dave Barr of Kelowna shot a 77.

Vance will represent Carter at opening of IOC session

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — The International Olympic Committee, hardening against President Carter's plan for moving the Olympic Games from Moscow, learned Thursday it will get a visit from Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

The state department confirmed Vance will open the 82nd session of the IOC at Lake Placid on Saturday night, prior to the Winter Olympic Games. He will be representing Carter. It is not uncommon for a head of state to formally open the meetings of the IOC as a gesture.

The announcement opened the door to the first contacts between the United States government and the IOC since Carter first intervened and asked the Olympics be taken away from Moscow as a reprisal for Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Lord Killanin, IOC president, said on his arrival at Lake Placid on Wednesday he had not asked for a meeting with Carter, and Carter had made no move to meet him. Killanin has insisted the Games cannot be moved from Moscow, and has called on the Olympic movement to resist pressures from governments.

By Thursday, at least 20 IOC members had arrived for the three-day session starting Sunday. Not one of them showed any sign of going along with Carter.

"We can't even think of moving the Games because Moscow has not broken an Olympic rule," said Lance Cross of New Zealand, a member of the executive board.

The board was scheduled to meet Thursday but Killanin postponed the meeting until today. Killanin stayed in his office in the quaint, rambling country hotel where the IOC will hold its most critical session this weekend.

Killanin studied reports from many of the national Olympic committees. More than 30 governments have supported Carter's boycott plan.

Leaders of the U.S. Olympic Committee — Robert Kane, president, and Col. Don Miller, executive director — were scheduled to meet with the IOC executive board today to deliver Carter's requests.

But USOC sources said Kane and Miller are not likely to advocate moving the Games with any great enthusiasm. When the USOC executive board met at Colorado Springs two weeks ago, the body voted to take Carter's demands to the IOC.

League okays Met sale but McDonald in limbo

NEW YORK (AP) — The National League formally approved the sale of New York Mets on Thursday and Joe McDonald, the team's general manager, confirmed he was talking with the American League's Texas Rangers about a potential job.

The Mets, the darlings of New York a decade ago but poor relations to the resurgent New York Yankees in recent seasons, were sold two weeks ago for $21.1 million, a record price for a sports franchise. The Mets, who drew nearly 2.7 million fans to Shea Stadium in 1970, attracted fewer than 800,000 paying customers last year.

The principal owners are club chairman Nelson Doubleday, president of the publishing firm which bears his name, and president Fred Wilpon, chairman of a Long Island real estate firm.

McDonald, 50, joined the Mets as their statistician when the club was born in 1962 and has been general manager the last five seasons. He was reported to be in line to assume a similar position with the Rangers, although one spokesman for the Arlington-based team said that McDonald would be joining, not replacing, Rangers general manager Eddie Robinson.

McDonald's contract with the Mets expires after the 1980 season and the club's new owners have to honor all existing contracts negotiated with the former owners, including Lorinda de Roulet.

She appeared slightly emotional after the NL owners unanimously approved the sale of the team. The woman who last season had taken so much criticism over the operation of the Mets said with a smile there was a benefit to no longer being its boss.

"I can boo now, I couldn't before," she said.

And when Wilpon was asked where he thought the team's major deficiences were, he quipped: "Sorry, I can't boo any more."

He said the new regime would begin working to lift the Mets out of last place in the NL East, where they have been the last three seasons. When asked what specific steps he would take, Wilpon replied, "I'm not a baseball expert. I'm going to leave that to the professionals."

But he did say that Joe Torre would remain as manager for the 1980 season. "I look upon Joe as an excellent manager and I don't see him leaving," Wilpon said.

Wilpon declined to say whether the Mets' future included McDonald. "He's a nice man. And I can say he has shown a willingness to work hard at his job the last 10 days. But I can't say any more than that."

McDonald, however, said he had asked for assurances that he could remain with the Mets — but none had been given.

Grimsley wins first round of assault suit

BOSTON (AP) — A federal judge has cleared Montreal Expos pitcher Ross Grimsley of intentionally injuring a Fenway Park spectator with a thrown baseball, but a jury will decide whether Grimsley was negligent.

The six-member jury began deliberating Thursday afternoon after U.S. district judge G. Joseph Tauro announced his decision, which cleared Grimsley of a civil suit charge of assault and battery.

"I have already decided that there is no evidence in this case to warrant a jury finding that the injury, if any, to (the plaintiff) was caused by the intentional conduct of Mr. Grimsley," Tauro told the jurors.

The plaintiff is David P. Manning Jr., 22, of Buffalo, N.Y.

Manning claimed the pitch into the stands was intentional and was in retaliation for insults from fans. He claims his vision was impaired when the ball hit him in the face.

At the time, Grimsley, who now pitches for the Expos of the National League, pitched for Baltimore Orioles.

Owens opposed to Carter boycott proposal

PARADISE VALLEY, Ariz. (AP) — Jesse Owens, who won four gold medals in the 1936 Olympics in Germany, says he opposes President Carter's proposed U.S. boycott of the Moscow Games.

"To me, it's not right in the eyes of God or the soul of man," said Owens.

"Politics and world events should be kept out of the Olympics. It hurts to have a kid who has trained, believed, lived, slept and ate Olympics for years, and suddenly someone says you can't go."

Owens, 66, has been undergoing chemotherapy treatment for cancer of the left lung.

His comments on the Olympics — in an interview with Rick Lanning published Thursday in the the Phoenix Gazette — were his first on the subject.

Said Owens: "I still have a lot of things to do, but my first priority is to to get well. You pray, and you believe in yourself. Otherwise it's in the hands of God."

Because Owens was black, German leader Adolf Hitler refused to congratulate him after he took gold medals in the 100- and 200-metre dash, the long jump and the 400-metre relay race, smashing the Nazi dictator's dream of Aryan supremacy.

Owens operates Jesse Owens Public Relations in Phoenix, which has contracts with a half dozen major U.S. corporations to provide motivational impact for employees, concentrating on the sales staff.

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — A New York state judge ruled Thursday that an athlete from Taiwan must be allowed to carry the island nation's traditional red-and-blue flag at the opening Wednesday of the 1980 Winter Olympics.

In a decision handed down in nearby Plattsburgh, Justice Norman L. Harvey said the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee may not stop Liang Ren-Guey, a Nordic skier from Taiwan, from using the flag of the Republic of China.

In effect, the judge overruled the policy of the International Olympic Committee, which recently re-admitted the People's Republic of China into the Olympic family and told Taiwan that it would have to adopt a new flag and anthem. The IOC also said the Taiwan group would have to go by the name Chinese Taipei Olympic Committee.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers announced Thursday that the uniform number worn by Duke Snider — No. 4 — will be retired at the National League baseball team's annual oldtimers game Sunday, July 6.

Snider was elected to the Hall of Fame earlier this year and will be officially inducted in the Hall at Cooperstown, N.Y., on Aug. 3.

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada's top two runners in women's 800 metres will compete in the event at the Second Edmonton Journal International Indoor Games Feb. 16, it was announced Thursday.

Anne Mackie-Morelli of Richmond and Debbie Campbell of Victoria, ranked No. 1 and 2 in Canada respectively, have been competing against each other on a regular basis. Mackie-Morelli beat Campbell at last year's Journal Games.

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders of the Canadian Football League have recorded an operating profit for the first time since 1972.

Club president Frank Finn said Thursday the addition of 7,750 seats to McMahon Stadium and the fine performance of the club during 1979 led to record profits from football operations of $140,612.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Jockey Club has raised the purses for its two most prestigious stakes races in 1980 at Exhibition Park.

The B.C. Derby and the Premier's Championship will both be $75,000-added affairs this year with gross purses in the range of $80,000.

California-bred Pole Position won both races in 1979 when they were $50,000-added events.

The Derby at 1 1-8 miles for three-year-olds is scheduled for Sept. 13 and the Premier's for three-year-olds and up is set for Oct. 4 over 1 38 miles.

The 114-day season begins April 14 aand concludes Oct. 18.

Cedar Hill triumphs in city swim meet

Cedar Hill amassed 643 aggregate points Wednesday to capture the Dickinson and Dunn trophy in the 55th annual junior high swim meet at Crystal Pool.

Placing second was St. Michael's University School with 556 points, narrowly edging Arbutus with 555. Spencer was fourth with 527.

Shoreline, garnering 327 points, earned the Archie McKinnon novice trophy for the third successive year. Second place went to Cedar Hill with 223 while Spencer placed third with 200.

Dunsmuir captured the girls' club 200 freestyle relays while Cedar Hill emerged victorious in the boys' event.

SMU grabbed the Victoria Amateur Swim Club trophy as private school with most points.

Parkland sniper holds slim lead

While their schools engage in a four-team dogfight for first place in the Greater Victoria senior boys' basketball league, John Ibbotson and Al Cole are fighting a private battle of their own.

Ibbotson, a holdover from Parkland Panthers' 1979 Island champion squad, and Cole of Belmont Braves, are one-two in the league scoring race.

Statistics released after of the first half show Ibbotson with 103 points, one more than Cole.

Ian Lang of Mount Douglas Rams is third with 95.

Marc Haas, Cole's teammate, leads players scoring 70 or more points with an impressive 57.8 field goal percentage (40 for 69). Haas, whose Braves are tied with Mount Douglas at eight points apiece, has 55 rebounds, also tops in the 'AA' league.

Second half play picks up today.

In senior girls' games Thursday, unbeaten Mount Douglas Ramblers solidified their hold on top of 'AA' division with a 76-43 victory over Spectrum.

Ramblers, now 11-0, got 28 points from Alison Snow while Juanita Hearn countered with 20 for Spectrum.

Elsewhere, Oak Bay earned its eighth win against three losses by dumping Stelly's 90-49. Sandy Smith scored 23 points and Sue Walton added 18 for the winners. Sandy Taylor scored 17 Stelly's points.

Cory Aspden scored 18 points as Esquimalt Dockers blitzed Belmont 60-37 and Gillian Poole contributed 18 points to Parkland's 58-40 triumph over Victoria High Tigers.

Sharon Walker scored 10 points as Reynolds squeaked out a 22-18 win over Lambrick Park.

Angry Pierre jabs

PRINCE GEORGE (UPC) — Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau flared up at a heckler who supported Prime Minister Clark's budget Thursday, telling the man the Tories would even "tax his mouth."

The interruption came as Trudeau was warning a crowd of about 1,000 supporters that provisions for higher energy costs in the Tory budget would be disastrous for the northern B.C. forest industry.

The heckler, Richard Dunn, a 31-year-old forestry contractor, shouted, "Crap!" as Trudeau charged the budget proposal to increase the gasoline excise tax by 18 cents a gallon was going to be used only "to pay for a foolish Tory mortgage promise."

Dunn later said he was not an avid Conservative supporter, but added that he had had enough of Trudeau.

The Liberal leader returned to his speech, saying the excise tax alone would have "savaged the forestry industry and possibly driven people out of work."

But Dunn yelled out that the excise tax would pay for subsidized imported, higher-priced oil used by the Maritime provinces.

"I don't mind an argument based on fact," said Trudeau, "but the budget you support will pay for a mortgage plan that will cost $2.8 billion by 1983 and in the same year the 18-cent excise tax will raise $2.4 billion."

He jabbed his finger at Dunn and said, "You can continue to shout until you're blue in the face, because that's the color of the party you support."

Trudeau immediately apologized for his outburst, but said that when he arrived in the hall, a woman had told him he should be his old arrogant self.

Students cheer games stance

WINNIPEG (UPC) — The Olympic boycott being theatened by Canada and other nations is "upsetting" to the Soviet Union, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald said Thursday.

"Every bit of intelligence that's coming to me from the Soviet Union indicates that if there is one thing that is concerning and upsetting the Soviets, it's the fact that many countries throughout the world are boycotting the Olympic Games in Moscow," she told about 1,000 boisterous University of Manitoba students during a question-and-answer session.

"They were very intent on using the Olympics as a propaganda item. Now they won't get that chance."

The generally sympathetic audience, which applauded her Olympics comments, turned hostile when questions arose about whether Canada would accept American draft-dodgers as it did during the U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

Miss MacDonald said the question was "strictly hypothetical," but "Canadians wouldn't want to give priority to Americans who were avoiding their responsibilities to their country."

That elicited a chorus of boos.

Miss MacDonald said Wednesday that Canada would not again become "a haven for draft-dodgers" if the U.S. reinstated compulsory military service.

Liberal overruns in millions—Tory

TORONTO (UPC) — A probe of 21 projects approved by the former Liberal government showed they cost $900 million more than they should have, Treasury Board President Sinclair Stevens said Thursday.

He told a news conference the obvious way to avoid such cost overruns in future would be not to re-elect a Liberal government whose former ministers were describing themselves as "good managers."

"I find it unbelievable that a government would allow their construction overruns to be so large," he said, noting that in private industry an overrun of five to 10 per cent would be regarded as a "disaster."

He said the $900 million in overruns was about 75 per cent above the total original estimated cost of the 21 projects, which included the proposed Pickering airport near Toronto, and Mirabel airport near Montreal.

Groups welcome Kemano 2 probe

Canadian Press

Two Prince George environmental groups have welcomed the provincial government's decision to hold a public inquiry into the proposed Kemano 2 project, but still remain cautious about the situation.

"It is an encouraging sign," Denis Wood, president of the Save the Bulkley Committee, said Thursday. "However, Victoria has been changing its mind with great regularity this week, so we should just wait and see."

Energy Minister Robert McClelland said Thursday that the project would face the government's new review process no matter who proceeded with it, or when.

"Future hydro-electric development at Kemano will not go ahead without a full public inquiry," he said. "Regardless of other questions relating to the power project, it is government policy that all hydro-electric projects must be submitted to the review process outlined in the provincial energy policy statement Monday."

Alcan Smelters and Chemicals Ltd., a subsidiary of Alcan Aluminum Ltd., plans to build an $800 million dam and hydro generating station on the Kemano River, near Kitimat in northwestern B.C., as part of a $2.5 billion plan to triple its smelting capacity.

McClelland, in outlining the energy policy Monday, stated B.C. Hydro would be responsible for any future hydro projects. On Tuesday, however, he softened his position and said there are several ways the project could be built under his new policy, though he wasn't sure of any of them.

Alcan is proposing to go ahead with the project under its 1950 water licence, which allows the company total development of the Nechako Valley watershed for hydro-electric purposes.

Wood said that while several special interest groups have individual concerns about the project, the overall concern is that Alcan can operate under an agreement made 30 years ago.

"Things are not the same as they were 30 years ago," he added.

Jacques Sequin, president of the Nechako Valley Conservation Association, said a public inquiry on the Kemano project was one of the things his group was pushing for.

"I hope it will be an inquiry similar to the Berger commission, carried out by someone impartial," he said. "Someone has got to go from region to region, listen to all sides."

McClelland's statements Thursday coincided with the release of a fish and wildlife branch report which said the project will damage fish, wildlife and the recreational value of a large area of central B.C.

The report said many kilometres of fish spawning and rearing areas will be flooded, some river flows will be drastically reduced and diversion of the Nanika and Kidprice rivers could introduce parasites into the Fraser River system.

Women's prison atmosphere better—report

Canadian Press

Recent improvements at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre (Oakalla) women's unit have resulted in a better atmosphere at the Burnaby institution, says corrections commissioner Bernard Robinson.

Robinson, in a report to Attorney-General Allan Williams, said establishment of a citizens' advisory committee and better internal communication have calmed the situation. Also included in the improvements will be a suggestion box for direct requests to the prison director.

Williams ordered Robinson to look into the situation in mid-Jannuary after two sit-in protests the month before at the jail near Vancouver.

Prisoner complaints involved medical, educational and visiting programs, the presence of male guards in the women's jail, excessive and arbitrary use of discipline and lack of communication with officials.

Two years ago, a royal commission investigation found the prison poorly administered and made more than 50 recommendations. Robinson's report noted that all but seven of the recommendations have been implemented.

Meanwhile, about 120 prisoners in the men's unit returned to their cells Thursday after an overnight demonstration which included smashing windows, furniture and water pipes.

Corporations group elusive

The crown corporations reporting committee, headed by Jack Kempf (SC—Omineca), is getting to be like the Cheshire cat in Alice in Wonderland. You see it briefly, then it disappears, leaving only its smile.

The committee, supposedly a watchdog over crown corporations, has met once since last May.

It was supposed to meet in January, but Kempf cancelled that meeting because of "holidays." That meeting was rescheduled for Feb. 14-15 but Kempf has postponed it to a later date.

Kempf's committee has a $400,000 research budget.

His "now-you-see-it-now-you-don't" routine has the New Democratic Party more than miffed. When Kempf finally gets around to holding a meeting he will be asked, by the NDP members of the committee, for his resignation.

But that call could also be an illusion. All government committees have a government majority.

Castro has cool idea for Cuban woodsmen

Cuban President Fidel Castro wants to send 10,000 Cuban woodcutters to Siberia because his tropical nation is suffering from a lumber shortage, "and besides, it's not as hot there." "If in a given moment we send 36,000 troops to Angola, 12,000 to Ethiopia; if we have stonemasons in Angola, Guinea, Libya and Iraq, why can't we have 10,000 men and women cutting wood in Siberia to meet our needs?" Castro told the National Assembly in Havana.

Rock star Elton John has made a personal plea to a missing English schoolgirl to contact her parents and pick up a reward—a day with him and his soccer club. John sent the message from Los Angeles where he is recording a new album.

An interstate tug-of-war is brewing over the woman who was the first person to survive a barrel ride over Niagara Falls, Annie Edson Taylor, who accomplised the feat on Oct. 24, 1901. At issue is whether to move her body to Bay City, Mich.—where she taught school—from a pauper's grave in Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Boris Bajanov, self-exiled former secretary to Josef Stalin and the Soviet Politburo, broke a long silence in Paris Wednesday to denounce Soviet "hegemonism" and urge Europe, the U.S. and China to form an alliance against the Russians. Bajanov fled the Soviet Union in 1928.

In Cape Town, South African Foreign Minister Roelof Botha threatened Angola and Zambia with reprisals for their alleged support of guerrillas in South-West Africa following reports of stepped-up fighting in the territory. Botha's warning came in a letter to UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin said in Jerusalem that Israel would make its first diplomatic protest to Egypt because of anti-Israeli slurs by a high-level Egyptian official. In Cairo, Egyptian deputy prime minister Hassan Tohamy stood by his remarks that Israel was "built on plundered Moslem soil" and that Jews were "treacherous and hypocritical." When told about the protest, he said: "Phooey to them."

The mother of a boy found buried under John Gacy's house in Chicago burst into sobs and fainted in the witness box at Gacy's mass murder trial Thursday as she identified a chain bracelet worn by her son. "That's Sam's bracelet!" cried Bessie Stapleton, 39. Gacy has pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity to the sex-related killings of 33 young men and boys.

Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap, who defeated the French at the epic battle of Dien Bien Phu and engineered the 11-year war that drove out the Americans, has been ousted as Vietnam's defence minister, the Soviet news agency Tass reported. A dispatch from the Vietnamese capital of Hanoi also said that Nguyen Duy Trinh was stripped of his post as foreign minister in the shakeup announced by President Ton Duc Thang.

A Rome magistrate rejected a claim by actress Sophia Loren for possession of her art collection seized by customs officials three years ago.

In Washington, D.C., U.S. presidential candidate Ronald Reagan charged Thursday that the Soviet Union was preparing Cuban troops for a likely invasion of Oman from South Yemen. Reagan said that President Carter was aware of the alleged Soviet scheme but refused to tell the public.

NAMES in the NEWS

Annie Moose, who may be the oldest living Canadian, celebrated her 113th birthday this week in Nelson House, Man.

In Los Angeles, scientist Edward Teller completed his lecture on nuclear power technology after cleaning up from being hit in the face with a pie.

Actress Carrie Snodgress has filed a $5-million assault and battery suit in Los Angeles against composer Jack Nitzsche in connection with an incident at her home last June. Nitzsche pleaded no contest Jan. 10 to a criminal charge of assault with a deadly weapon. Miss Snodgress' civil suit said that Nitzche, Miss Snodgress' former lover, "threatened to shoot her with a hand gun, dragged her by the hair and kicked her," hit her with his fists and threatened to shoot her seven-year-old child.

"I have to make my stand on my convictions," says Rev. Archie Hopkins, pastor of the Greater Solid Rock Church of God in Christ, in Portland, Ore. Hopkins said he wouldn't comply with a court order to put a lid on the noise level of his church services. The decibels come from amplified voices and organ music, a full set of drums, a saxophone, tambourine and electric guitar.

Singer Debby Boone is working in Nashville, Tenn., on her first solo album of Christian music.

Theodore Bundy, a convicted killer already under a death sentence for murdering two sorority sisters, was convicted in Orlando, Fla., of killing a 12-year-old schoolgirl. Bundy, 33, is already on Florida's death row, awaiting execution in the bludgeoning deaths of two Florida State University women.

Bo's take $1 million for movie

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Bo Derek, the latest sex symbol who made only $35,000 for her role in 10 last year, will earn $1 million in a movie she will star in later this year, producer Martin Ransohoff said Thursday.

Ransohoff told a news conference that Miss Derek's husband, John, would direct the film, which had not yet been titled.

Miss Derek, who was at the news conference, beamed when Ransohoff announced the amount of money she would get for the movie.

She also said she would star soon in a remake of Tarzan, the Ape Man.

The 23-year-old actress is currently starring for Ransohoff in A Change of Seasons with Shirley MacLaine and Anthony Hopkins.

Mel Blanc moves from Bugs to robot age

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Thuffering thuccotash! Mel Blanc has entered the space age as an educated robot—Twiki in Buck Rogers.

For 42 years, Blanc has been originating comical voices for the film studios, and at 71, he can be heard on TV and radio commercials, as well as old cartoons.

"Lately I've developed another line of work: lecturing at colleges," says Blanc. "I've gone to 83 campuses in the past two years. The kids know all about the old cartoons. They grew up on them."

With his round face and trimmed moustache, he looks like any business executive, but into his conversation drop Porky Pig, Wyle E. Coyote, Yosemite Sam, Foghorn Leghorn, Speedy Gonzalez, Roadrunner and especially Bugs Bunny ("my favorite, because he's the most popular").

The late 1930s and the 1940s were the heyday of the cartoon short and Blanc remembers that Warner Bros. turned out 52 a year at $50,000 each.

He worked only once for Disney: "I was to do Giddy the cat in Pinocchio and he started out as a tipsy character. Then Walt thought the audience might consider him a drunk.

"I worked 18 days and Disney paid $50 a day. All that remained of my work was one hiccup. Not bad—$800 for a hiccup."

Victoria-filmed movie in line for Canada awards

TORONTO (CP) — The Changeling, a thriller starring George C. Scott and his wife, Trish Van Devere, leads the pack in nominations for this year's Canadian film awards, it was announced Thursday.

The $7.5-million movie received 10 nominations, edging out Jack London's Klondike Fever, which has nine chances in the feature film category of the first annual Academy of Canadian Cinema awards. The awards ceremony takes place March 20 in Toronto.

The three other nominees for best picture are Meatballs (which received a total of eight nominations), Cordelia and Running— each of which were named in six other categories.

The Changeling, shot in Victoria, Vancouver, Seattle and New York, features Scott as a composer embroiled in a supernatural mystery. The film will not premiere until a week after the awards ceremony.

Included in its nominations are best screenplay adaptation, best foreign actor and actress and best supporting actress (Frances Hyland and Helen Burns).

The critically acclaimed Murder By Decree, starring Christopher Plummer as Sherlock Holmes and James Mason as Dr. Watson, earned eight nominations, including best director (Bob Clark). Being a British-Canadian co-production, academy rules prevented its inclusion in best picture category.

Stephen Lack's much-touted performance in the autobiographical film Rubber Gun, earned him a nomination for best actor; others vying for that award are Plummer, Robin Gammell for Klondike Fever, Thomas Hauff for Summer's Children, and Geoffrey Bowes for Something's Rotten.

Panned by the critics but loved by the public, the comedy Meatballs—concerning life in an undisciplined summer camp—became a top money-maker in the Canadian film industry. The $1.6-million film took a best foreign actor nomination for its American star, Bill Murray, and nominations for Canadians Kate Lynch, Harvey Atkins and Chris Makepeace.

Joining Miss Lynch for best actress honors are Claire Pimpare for Yesterday and Quebec actress Louise Marleau for L'Arrache Coeur; Louise Portal for her portrayal of a woman wrongly accused of murder in Cordelia, and Micheline Lanctot for Mourir Tue-Tete, a powerful semi-documentary about rape. That film also earned best director and screenplay nominations for Anne Claire Poirier.

Running, the story of a middle-aged runner who tries for the Olympics, brought best foreign actor nominations for Michael Douglas and Susan Anspach.

Joe Grimaldi has an 80-per-cent chance of winning an award for best over-all sound: He was involved in four of the five productions nominated in that category.

Man found guilty of wounding wife

Kenneth Lucas Carter, 44, was found guilty by a B.C. Supreme Court jury Thursday of intentionally wounding his estranged wife, Maureen, 40, during a domestic dispute in a Saanich house April 28.

The jury, which deliberated two hours and 20 minutes, found him not guilty of attempted murder. Carter was found guilty of common assault against his wife's friend, June Burns, but not guilty of the more serious offence of assault causing bodily harm.

Mr. Justice Howard Callaghan will sentence Carter Feb. 25 after a pre-sentence report is prepared. Bail of $10,000 and one surety was continued, but Carter was ordered to have no contact with his wife and Burns and his employer must sign the surety.

The jury returned once to the courtroom during deliberations to ask for a portion of the evidence to be read back and to hear again the legal definition of intent.

The offences occurred in Burns's house where Mrs. Carter was staying after separating a month earlier from her husband. Carter went to the house with a socket wrench which he wielded against his wife.

While Burns said she was struck on the head and shoulder with the wrench, Carter testified he was pretty certain he hadn't done it because he had no reason.

Carter told the jury he believed his wife was going away for the weekend with another man and lost his temper. He said he took the wrench to the house "as a form of protection" expecting to find a man there.

City official fined in U.S.

A Victoria zoning administrator was fined $500 and placed on one year's probation following his appearance this week in California Superior Court.

Fleming Zuhling, 55, of the city planning department, was charged under section 23101 of the California Vehicle Code—driving while under the influence of alcohol—following a Dec. 19 accident 110 kilometres north of Santa Barbara.

Zuhling and Ky Peterson of Victoria left for a scheduled, 10-day trip to Mexico three days before the mishap, which occurred during heavy night rainfall. Peterson suffered broken shoulder and ribs, and other injuries and had to be pried from Zuhling's 1967 Ford LTD. Zuhling escaped with minor injuries and bruises.

Zuhling first appeared in Santa Maria Superior Court on Jan. 8 and was bound over until Tuesday for disposition of the charge. He was released from jail Jan. 17.

'Adventurer' Burton dies

Life was like a trail through Adventure Land for Col. Paul Lee Burton.

Wednesday that trail came to an end.

Journalist, soldier, and in later years a driving force behind a new rightwing political party, Burton died in Royal Jubilee Hospital at 67.

Hamilton-born and a resident of Victoria for about 12 years, Burton was described in a story in the Colonist's Islander magazine 10 years ago as the grandson of British author Sir Charles Burton and son of an Austrian princess.

The Canada Party, which he saw in 1977 as a means of stopping Canada from turning into a "French dictatorship republic," appears to have predeceased him.

A close friend said Thursday that Burton lost interest after failing to enlist dissident Liberal James Richardson as leader of a party bent on confining the French language to Quebec and battling Soviet espionage. The Canada Party never did come up with the legion of federal candidates that Burton had hoped for.

Burton rose to the rank of colonel while serving in the Second World War.

He saw action at Dunkirk, Dieppe, North Africa and Italy, and was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross.

Re-enlisting in 1950, he served in Korea for the next three years.

According to the Islander feature in 1970, Burton's father was a member of the British international riding team when he met Princess Catherina in Vienna and married her aboard a ship that was taking them to Canada and a new life.

Since the marriage didn't meet with the approval of her father, Prince Paul Esterhazy, the young couple had to settle for a humble, ordinary way of life in their chosen country.

Burton is survived by his wife, Dora. A funeral service will be held at 3 p.m. Monday in St. Andrew's Chapel on the Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt. Cremation will follow.

Forces cadets ready for rifle competition

Canadian Forces cadets representing corps across Canada will compete in Dominion of Canada Rifle Association small bore team championships in Victoria April 1 and 2.

Seventy-two cadets will vie for the 18-member army cadet rifle team which will represent Canada at Commonwealth matches in Bisley, England, this summer.

Eagle-eyed shooters will fire the Anshutz-22 rifle during the competition.

Language studied in three-part harmony

Chinese plug in to B.C. technology

By PAUL De GROOT
Colonist reporter

Xia Zongwan has given himself six months to learn three new languages.

The first the Chinese scientist must learn is English. Although he enunciates clearly, he is still acquiring the vocabulary and confidence he needs to speak the language well.

The second language is that of his discipline, oceanography. Like most scientific fields it has its own lingo, and learning to speak it is essential to success in the field.

The third language is FORTRAN, the language understood by the computers at the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Pat Bay, where Xia is gaining knowledge about western technology through a scientific exchange program which has resulted in hundreds of Chinese scientists like himself being sent out to learn more about western technology. Although computers are commonplace in Canada, and few undergraduate science students get into their third year without some experience on them, electronic brains are a rarity in China, and Xia (pronounced shah) has never used one.

His inexperience with this necessity of modern science is one of the shortcomings of modern Chinese science, whose status (he pauses to look up the word, then uses it carefully and correctly) has suffered during the political upheavals of recent decades.

China now hopes to remedy that weakness by sending scientists like Xia abroad to learn from their counterparts in scientifically-advanced countries.

About a dozen Chinese scientists have come to B.C., to work primarily in universities, gaining knowledge about western science and technology which they can take back to their own country.

In some fields, particularly theoretical fields, Chinese scholars have kept up with their Western counterparts, but in technical matters they have fallen behind. After learning his languages, Xia will dip into Western oceanographical knowledge, first as an associate researcher in an IOS project, and perhaps at some point on a project in his specialty, physical oceanography and currents.

As an example of the problems posed by the lack of computers, Xia cites long-term recording. In China, long-term measurements of currents employ paper tapes, which run, at most, for 1½ months. Similar measurements with magnetic tape can continue uninterrupted for five to six months, and when played into a computer, be available in a convenient form within minutes.

The oceanographic institute in which Xia works in Qing Dao, a major Yellow Sea port of more than one million people, is about the same size as the IOS, but has no computers at all.

One of Xia's tasks while he is in Canada will be to gain familiarity with electronic data processing, and he will be preparing a report for his institute on computer systems which it might consider purchasing.

Political policies within China have had an important influence on the country's scientists. Xia graduated in 1964 and worked for two years before the Cultural Revolution began in 1966. Little in the way of scientific work was accomplished during that time, which was followed by the period of the Gang of Four.

"Since 1976, with the smash of the Gang of Four, there has been a change of policy," Xia said in an interview. "We decided to catch up to other advanced countries."

The 10 years of upheaval, coupled with the rapid advance of scientific knowledge and technology, mean that many Chinese scientists like himself must "do it from the ABCs," he said.

Xia is warmly appreciative of his reception in Canada.

"I want to thank the Canadian government and people who have helped me. I find Canada a very friendly country."

In addition to the technical information he picks up, Xia is also interested in fostering better ties between Chinese and the Canadian scientists who have helped him and his colleagues.

The IOS helped him find accommodation in Victoria, and he catches a ride to the institute each day with another institute employee who helps him with his English. A programmer at the institute is helping with his FORTRAN and members of the local Chinese community have made him feel at home.

Although Victoria and his native city are 6,000 miles apart, they bear an uncanny resemblance. Quing Dao, at about the latitude of San Francisco, has a rocky shoreline and a hilly landscape with bare rock showing in places. Xia pulls out a postcard showing a scene which, except for the Chinese architecture, could easily be a view across Shelbourne to distant Mount Douglas.

Qing Dao even has a tourist industry of sorts. Although its winters are cool because weather systems sweep down on China from Siberia, the city's mild summers, with temperatures in the low 30s, attract many vacationers, Xia says.

And who around here would quarrel with his touching conclusion about his temporary home in Victoria?

"I think the people in Victoria are like the climate. Very warm and very friendly."

Modern technology will come to Chinese scientists through those sent abroad such as Xia

Superstars of future

Obscure plants rooted in ingenuity

By JANE E. BRODY
Colonist-New York Times Service

TUCSON, Ariz. — Lush lettuce leaves jut from a Styrofoam sheet that floats on a nutrient-rich pond where young catfish are growing. Fat cantaloupes hang from an A-frame trellis that straddles the pond. While the melons are growing, three or four crops of lettuce can be harvested. By the time the melons are ripe, the lettuce is done and the Styrofoam can be removed. Then the trellis is shaken, causing the melons to fall into the pond where they float for easy harvest.

Nearby, pole beans wind their way up corn stalks, between which rows of bush beans have already matured. A few rows down, pigeon peas (dahl), which like the beans are a nitrogen-producing legume, grow among nitrogen-hungry stalks of sugar cane, with the peas ready for harvest just when the cane is big enough to shade them.

Sound like a plan to feed a crowded world? That's just what it is—a scheme to get the most food from available land and resources—and it may well be how the food in your future is produced.

But you won't have to wait too long into the future to see it. These are among an array of imaginative approaches to farming that will be depicted in a huge new attraction, the Experimental Prototype Community of Tomorrow, being constructed at Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla.

The University of Arizona's Environmental Research Laboratory here is developing the food production schemes for the Land Pavilion, to be sponsored by Kraft. The exhibition is scheduled to open in October 1982.

Merle H. Jensen, horticultural futurist at the Tucson laboratory, said that traditional agriculture has been restricted to linear growth on arable or irrigatable land. "But if we're going to feed the masses of the future—a projected six billion by the year 2000—we're going to have to extend agriculture to such harsh environments as the desert and tropics and get production into the air as well as on the ground," he said. "Instead of farming by the square foot, we're doing it on a cubic volume basis."

Controlled environment agriculture, the laboratory's specialty, strives to reduce the need for costly and scarce fuel and nutrients. Hence, the intercropping of legumes, which can use nitrogen from the air to produce their own fertilizer, with other food crops that need extra fertilizer.

Another scheme involves growing heat-intolerant plants, like lettuce, in hot climates by "air-conditioning" only the nutrient broth that surrounds their roots instead of having to cool the entire greenhouse.

The laboratory is also testing self-contained systems. In one, fruit-laden tomato plants hang from a moving conveyor as their roots swish through a nutrient mist. The dripping roots then pass over a pond of water hyacinth, a fast-growing tropical weed that acts as a living filter for nutrient "runoff" and could be used as biomass to provide the gas to fuel the conveyor.

The conveyor belt also permits passing the plants through specific environmental conditions, such as light to stimulate flowering or gases to induce ripening, Jensen said.

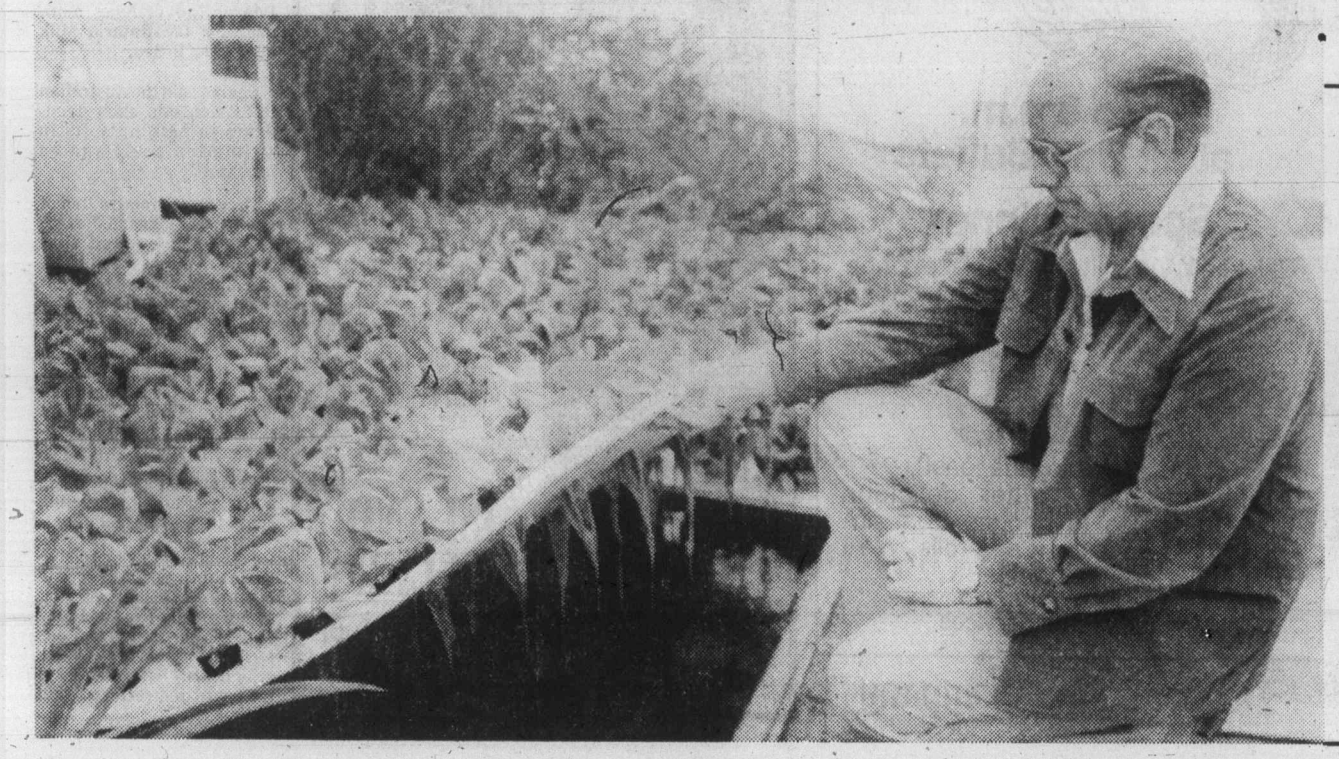
Another possibility under study is irrigation with nitrogen-rich sea water to grow salt-tolerant plants called halophytes that might be used as protein-rich forage or seed crops for animals or people, he said. Halophytes are being grown experimentally along the Gulf of California and are the great hope for "greening up" the 20,000 miles of desert coastline in the world.

And at a current cost of $500 per pound to supply food for space travellers, the laboratory is also developing a system by which future space colonists might grow their own food. Since plants need gravity to orient their roots and shoots, the effect of gravity might be created in space by means of a revolving drum.

As Jensen demonstrated, lettuce plants can then grow from the walls of the drum, with their gravity-seeking roots flying out ("like Phyllis Diller's hair," he said) toward the simulated gravity and their leaves growing away from gravity toward the light in the centre of the drum.

The Tucson laboratory, known internationally for its imaginative agricultural schemes (an air-inflated greenhouse of the laboratory's design is now home for vegetable crops being grown with desalted sea water in Abu Dhabi on the Arabian Peninsula), is focusing on ingenious new ways to grow the world's major food crops and on producing now-obscure plants that may become the nutrient superstars of the future.

Thus, the desert portion of the Disney exhibit will depict, in addition to traditional crops like date palms, such drought-tolerant plants as the buffalo gourd, whose seeds are rich in oil and protein and whose roots are loaded with starch, or the tepary bean, on which the Papago Indians lived for hundreds of years. And the tropics at Disney World will grow the wing bean, a hardy, heat-tolerant, protein-rich legume, along with the more traditional cocoa, yams, plantains and bananas.



Horticulturist Jensen lifts lid on catfish pond filled with nutrient

CHISANBOP
Fingertips master math

WINNIPEG (CP) — Mathematics instructor Margaret Froese says she has seen a lot of teaching methods come and go.

But until Chisanbop, or fingertip math, she says she saw very few children who actually enjoyed the subject.

"Chisanbop makes it so much fun," she said in an interview. "And it's so personal that once they know it, they never forget it."

Mrs. Froese and her husband, David, have been conducting Chisanbop workshops for teachers.

In the last year, at least 55 schools in Winnipeg school division have one or more teachers with touch-math training, Mrs. Froese said.

"It's made much faster progress than I thought it would. But it's only the beginning."

Chisanbop—which in Korean means counting on the fingers—was developed 30 years ago by a Korean abacus expert.

The fingers are used to count to 99, with larger numbers being carried over by memory or written down.

The thumb on the right hand has a place value of five, while each finger represents an additional unit. The thumb on the left hand stands for 50 and each finger counts 10.

Children count and calculate by pressing the appropriate fingers lightly on a table in front of them.

Mrs. Froese said she and her husband were introduced to Chisanbop when they saw children use the method to beat a computer on a television show two summers ago.

They were so impressed they attended a workshop on the method in Dallas, Tex.

By using their fingers, "children can feel the numbers and understand what they mean," Mrs. Froese said. "With traditional teaching methods, a child might not understand the concept. By the time the teacher finds out, it's difficult to isolate the problem."

But with Chisanbop, "you can tell immediately if a message has sunk in because they won't be able to perform the next operation."

Fingertip math takes a big effort on the part of the teacher, who not only has to check for correct answers, but must watch several pairs of hands as well, Mrs. Froese said.

She said Chisanbop is "a learning experience conducive to raising students' self-image and self-confidence. It removes much of the anxiety children experience when learning math."

For those who worry that children might be stuck using their fingers for life, Mrs. Froese said students automatically begin calculating in their heads as math questions become more complicated.

She said her only concern about the method is that children be given enough time to learn it.

"Don't push too hard," she warns the teachers who attend her workshops. "Take the time and work with them until they understand. They have to be able to do it like that—fast."

That takes about a year, she added, but it's worth it.

Warning signals listed for severe depression

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: How does a person know if he is depressed? I realize it isn't possible to be happy all the time, yet I fear my bout with "the blahs" or "the blues" is more intense than what the average person experiences.

Please describe the symptoms of depression so I can have a better understanding of what goes on with me. I feel isolated and inadequate. — OK Today But Worried About Tomorrow

Dear Worried: Between six and eight million Americans suffer from severe depression, according to the National Institute of Mental Health, so if you are severely depressed, you are not alone.

Dr. John Kane, who heads the depression clinic at the Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Centre, listed the common warning signals of severe depression in an interview with Olive Evans of the New York Times. Here they are:

- Feelings of sadness and hopelessness ("I will never be better").
- Loss of the "pleasure capacity," the ability to enjoy anything.
- Loss of interest in sex.
- Loss of appetite (or over-eating).
- Insomnia (or sleeping too much).
- Anxious or restless behavior (or apathy).
- Difficulty in concentration, remembering things and making decisions.
- Becoming upset by small things.
- Feelings of worthlessness ("I'm no good").
- Withdrawal from friends and relatives.

If you see yourself in six or more of the above, you are probably severely depressed. I urge you to take this column to your physician and talk to him about your depression. Ask him to recommend a counsellor. If you cannot afford a private therapist, check the phone book under "mental health clinics." There are many excellent government-funded clinics that cost very little. Moreover, you've already paid for them through your taxes, so GO.

Dear Ann Landers: A 26-year-old woman wrote and wanted to know, "Where are all the decent men?" I'm a 27-year-old male asking another question. "Where are all the decent women?"

I am a college graduate, have a good job and have never been married. (No, I'm not gay.) In an average week, I ask two girls for dates. In 10 average weeks, I get turned down about 19 times, which leaves me about five dates a year.

If the girl accepts, it's a safe bet that she's a junkie, a lesbian, an alcoholic, a nymphomaniac, has the IQ of a houseplant or she is madly in love with a married man.

True, a lot of men these days are (as the writer said) homosexuals, alcoholics, spaced-out or just plain rats —so, the only advice I can give HER is keep looking. She needs to find only one good man to win.

Any advice for me, Ann? —Mellow As A Cello

Dear Mellow: Yes—the same as yours to the woman who wrote. Keep looking.

CONFIDENTIAL to Explain It Please: Jonathan Swift said it best. "Good manners is the art of making people comfortable. Whoever makes the fewest people uncomfortable has the best manners."

Sweet treat for guiding light

Sweet treat caps a perfect evening. Helen Johnson of 825 Cook Street in Victoria cuts cake commemorating her 70 years of association with Girl Guides of Canada during dinner in her honor Monday at Victoria Guide House, 938 Mason. Greetings were read from Barbara Haye, chief guiding commissioner of Canada, and provincial and area guiding councils, and a pin was received from Yukon Guide Council. Mrs. Johnson was one of original Girl Guides of Canada, joining in Toronto in 1910, and has been a tireless worker for the guiding movement in the past seven decades. Greater Victoria Girl Guides will be celebrating 70th anniversary during Scout and Guide Week, Feb. 17 to 24, with numerous activities planned.

Canadian charities listed in directory

TORONTO (CP) — Want to make a donation to a charity in your province for a friend who has died?

Or are you involved with a charitable organization in dire need of funding?

Three ambitious Toronto women, who spent years as volunteers, have adopted a unique idea to list myriad charitable foundations and organizations in a national directory entitled The Canadian Book of Charities: The Guide to Intelligent Giving.

It was first printed last fall, but in the initial venture Yvonne Trapman, Frances Dobbs and Norma Laing managed to incorporate only a few national and Ontario charitable organizations.

In February, however, they plan to travel to British Columbia and Alberta to contact charities who wish to be listed in the second directory, planned for this fall.

The idea was developed by Mary Eastman, a former Torontonian now living in London, England.

She became involved in publishing an annual book about deserving and authentic charity organizations and institutions in that country.

It was designed to be a guide to lawyers, accountants, trust companies, foundations, estate planners and others through whom charitable organizations might seek funds or bequests or donors might wish to contribute.

The three women read about the idea in a newspaper and decided to embark on a similar venture in Canada.

Last fall, they distributed 9,000 copies of the directory and soon received questions from charitable groups seeking space in the 1980 directory.

The women had many headaches in compiling the first directory.

"The first thing we discovered was that you cannot get a list of incorporated charities and their fields of operation from the Canadian government," said Mrs. Dobbs. "They come under the Official Secrets Act, of all things."

"We went through the telephone books—and Bell Canada was very co-operative," said Mrs. Trapman. "We spent hours in their offices getting information from books outside of Metro Toronto and the Financial Post was a great help."

They looked into charities or benevolent organizations, tramped streets and drove miles making personal contacts.

An important section of the book deals with tax treatment of charitable donations and the advantages of every kind of giving are explained.

Address for the Canadian Book of Charities is: 124 Westwood Lane, Thornhill, Ont. L4J 1R1.

Milk flows with new pitch

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Dairy farmers may soon forget the health message and go for plenty of skin, youthful vigor and sexual innuendo to sell milk to teenagers.

An official of the National Dairy Council in Ottawa said in a telephone interview this week that the industry is convinced the approach will sell more milk, but there are some who hesitate about the image it will create.

"There's a bit too much skin," he said of the advertising and promotion scheme that has been used with great success in Australia.

Des Cooper of the Victoria Dairy Industry Authority in Australia said the aim of the campaign there is to take away some of the market from soft drinks by offering lightly-flavored milk.

He thinks Canadians should try caramel, egg flip or coffee flavors. Six flavors have been tried in Australia and the dairy industry says it has increased milk sales by 10 to 12 per cent and has reduced soft-drink sales by 10 per cent.

"We are studying it (the Australian scheme) at some length," said Michael Pearce, advertising manager for the Ontario Milk Marketing Board.

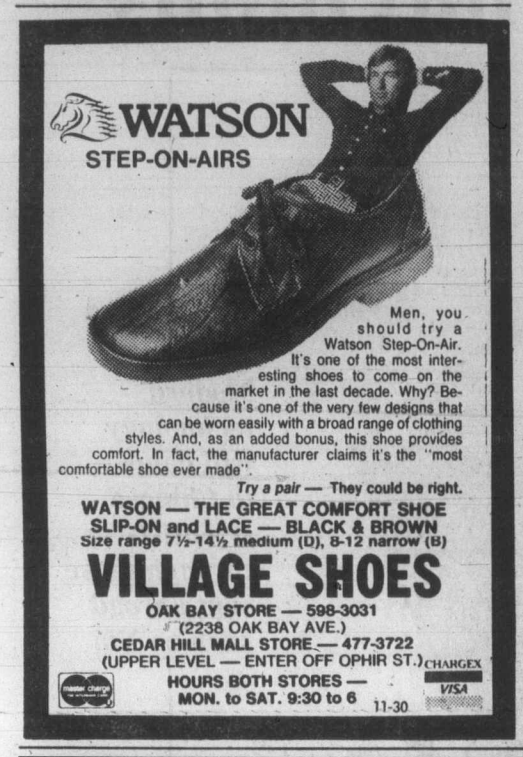
Pearce said the Australian television ads show teenagers in bathing suits in swimming pools and on beaches.

They are attractive, full of vigor and having fun, Pearce said. He conceded that "some closeups are titillating, but it depends on your mind. They are all dressed in bathing suits."

Cooper said the promotion won't work if one dairy or only a few pick it up as an exclusive product. He said it should be promoted and coordinated industry-wide.

Pearce said he is drafting a proposal to the marketing board for test marketing.

"We need a bit more consultation and data, some from Cooper in Australia, some from the Ontario Dairy Council and some from our technical people here (at the milk board) before we go to the board of directors," said Pearce.



WATSON
STEP-ON-AIRS

Men, you should try a Watson Step-On-Air. It's one of the most interesting shoes to come on the market in the last decade. Why? Because it's one of the very few designs that can be worn easily with a broad range of clothing styles. And, as an added bonus, this shoe provides comfort. In fact, the manufacturer claims it's the "most comfortable shoe ever made".

Try a pair — They could be right.

Hyperventilation high intense as chemical trip

TORONTO (CP) — Deep and rapid breathing is "the most powerful mind-altering substance other than chemicals I know of," says a doctor who has supervised more than 2,500 LSD experiments.

For the last three years, Dr. Stanislav Grof and his wife, Christina, have been conducting workshops in California on the use of music and hyperventilation to achieve "an altered state of consciousness."

Grof, 49, a psychiatrist, was a leader in research into therapeutic uses of LSD (lysergic acid diethylamide) before the drug became controversial in the 1960s.

Caroline Lensen, a therapist at the Donwood Institute in Toronto, found the hyperventilation high she achieved as intense as an LSD experience she had under Grof's supervision.

"For part of the session I experienced my own birth process—I became my own mother."

The technique is simple: Relax with eyes closed, breathe in and out deeply and rapidly while listening to music. Within half an hour, Grof says, people are having what they describe as birth-death experiences; in an hour, hallucinations.

Deep breathing appears to produce none of the mental damage said to be associated with the overuse of LSD. Grof says the subject is always in complete control and if the experience becomes too intense, he only needs to breathe normally and his sensations return to normal.

"People who have tried both like this one better," Grof said in a telephone interview from the Esalen Institute in Big Sur.

"You aren't drawn in under the experience, and you do have a full sense of responsibility from minute to minute."

But Tom Verny, a Toronto psychiatrist using the technique with some patients, says he was so wracked with pain he passed out during the experience.

Cramps and vomiting are other hazards, Grof says.

Dr. John Sutton, a high-altitude physiologist at McMaster University, says the massive expulsion of carbon dioxide causes increased blood acidity which can slow the flow of blood to the brain—leading to cramping, fainting and vomiting.

But he says the body has a levelling mechanism that returns the acid level to normal.

"The physical side effects are a function of the person themselves," Grof says, although he cannot explain the physical reason for the effects of his technique.

Grof started using the technique as a result of LSD sessions in which patients lost control. He had read about hallucinatory states that Indian yogis achieved through pranayara, an ancient deep-breathing exercise.

"I discovered that by using the breathing and music I could bring my patients back to the point in their LSD trip where they had lost control and we could work through the uncompleted part of their feelings."

However, there is a lack of data about the technique because, in contrast with the scientific nature of their LSD research, the Grofs have taught their exercise to anyone who pays for the experience.

Fees at recent workshops in Toronto and Montreal ranged between $100 and $150.

Vaccine emphasizes flu type

Dear Dr. Donohue: What kind of flu bug is going around this year and what are the symptoms? — T.Y.

The symptoms of influenza remain the same regardless of the strain of virus causing it. These are fever, chills, muscle aches, headache, scratchy throat, nasal stuffiness and dry cough.

The influenza virus is able to change its coat, and even though it is basically the same bug it "looks different" to the body. It becomes a new strain of the virus. The body defences are fooled, and for this reason protection from past exposure is lost or has only limited effect. The body thinks it is a "new" virus because of the changed appearance.

Manufacturers try to make vaccines to protect against anticipated changes in the viruses, which they know occur cyclically. The vaccine currently being made is for protection against two "A" strains of the virus (Brazil and Texas) and one "B" strain (Hong Kong). The strains are named for the places where they first appeared.

Rest, fluids and aspirins are the best treatment for the flu symptoms, which will persist until the virus has worn itself out.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My doctor wants to operate on me to remove gallstones. I have heard and read about dissolving them, and that this eliminates the need for surgery. What is new in this field? — J.R.

Surgery remains the chief treatment for gallstone removal, although very interesting work and successes have been reported with the technique you mention, called "chenotherapy" (sic). Much of the work is being done in England, but some of it is going on in NorthAmerica, also.

Even were this technique to come into common use, it would be only for selected patients. Another drawback is the length of time required for this process to work. Also, many gallstone attacks require immediate surgical action to remove the stones.

I would trust the doctor's decision to remove your stones surgically.

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Donohue: I was told that my periodic headaches are due to tension. Yet I am also told that the reason I get the pain is because of muscle contraction. How does this happen? — Mrs. N.N.

Tension headache is also known as "psychogenic" or "nervous" headache, and the immediate cause is contraction of muscles—those of the neck and scalp specifically. The actual muscle contraction at the time of the headache can be demonstrated by electromyogram tests. A discussion of this, which I read recently, suggests that blockage of blood supply because of the muscle contraction might be a cause.

It is also true that many muscle contraction headaches appear to be touched off by emotional factors—depression, anxiety, etc.

Dear Dr. Donohue: This is probably the longest name you've had tossed at you in years—"spondylolisthesis." That's what I have, and my doctor almost had a seizure pronouncing it for me. I can't even try. What does it mean? — J.H.

Fortunately, the explanation is easier than the pronunciation.

Spondylolisthesis (SPON-dih-LO-liss-THEE-sis) is the slipping forward of one of the sections (vertebra) of the spinal column, pulling it out of line with the ones above and below it.

This is a fairly common cause of low back pain. The usual cause is a slight malformation at birth. Exercises help correct any resulting sway to the lower back, and sometimes surgery is necessary to fuse the slipped spine section to the neighboring ones.

IODE—dedicated toward enriching lives

IODE will celebrate its 80th anniversary Feb. 13.

The Canadian organization has thousands of women in every province and territory donating their energy, talent, training and intelligence to strengthen and enrich country and community.

Generous overseas assistance is provided as well by IODE.

Funds of the numerous IODE activities are raised in a variety of ways. For example, a Newfoundland chapter sells jewelry made from Codfish ears. Some of the large annual scholarships are funded from interest on accounts set up with money raised in past years. Other awards are made possible through bequests to IODE.

Last year the National Chapter awarded $74,000 in scholarships.

Highlights from last year's projects include $40,000 in new clothing donated to refugees including the boat people, $1,000 to purchase a horse for a group providing riding for disabled people, a $50,000 pledge to furnish a replica of a prime minister's office in the Diefenbaker Cultural Centre, $15,000 for the library in the Pauline McGibbon Cultural Centre focussing on women in the arts, and innumerable charitable, social and health programs for young and old across Canada.

One chapter received their provincial government's award in education for outstanding contributions to children for initiating a pen pal program linking classrooms across Canada.

IODE members ran auditory screening clinics to detect hearing problems, particularly with pre-schoolers. IODE chapters contributed $24,000 to buy six travelling incubators for the Northwest Territories and junior chapters carried out Operation Frostbite, knitting mittens for children in Labrador.

Members have also started and signed a People to People Petition urging Quebec to remain in Confederation.

All of this is the tip of the IODE project iceberg, and all of it was done last year.

Of major importance was a trip undertaken by two national officers at the behest of the Newfoundland government to the remote settlements along the east coast of Labrador to determine specific needs there and set up contacts.

They found the need so great in these white, Inuit and Indian communities that they found it difficult to believe they were still in Canada.

Library shelves exist in schools but they are empty. Community hall, where they can be found, are empty shells, needing, in one instance, a furnace and chimney.

Neither the people of Labrador nor the Newfoundland provincial government have the resources to supply these things.

A start has been made by IODE. A provincial chapter will pay for a road to be built connecting waters edge to village, over which equipment for drilling water wells can be hauled. At present water is hauled in pails.

The National Chapter has sent an incubator, food, clothing, a loan for lumber to complete buidling on a community hall for one village.

Future plans call for support of members across Canada to supply books, clothing, food, equipment for community halls and nursing stations, bursaries for training young adults in trades, and salaries for trained local women to instruct in nutrition, budgeting and child care.

Government cutbacks in funds allotted to education and social services leave huge gaps which can only be filled through volunteer efforts. Any Canadian woman who wishes to make her contribution through affiliation with IODE is encouraged to contact a local or provincial chapter.

The National Chapter, IODE, may be contacted at 40 Orchard View Blvd., Toronto, Ont., M4R 1B9. For information in Victoria phone 384-7081.

National leader to visit city Elks

National leader of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of Canada, A.J. Malakoe, will visit Victoria Lodge 2 at a special meeting Tuesday.

Malakoe, a native of Saskatoon, has been an active member of the BPO Elks of Canada for the past 31 years.

The Elks, a fraternal organization founded in Canada in 1912, has a total membership of 51,000 with a national charity objective in the Elks Purple Cross Fund. The fund in addition to providing aid to children under 19 years of age has expanded in recent years to include the Elks Deaf Detection and Development Program, a national program focusing on the earliest possible identification and intervention of hearing impairment.

The Feb. 14 meeting has been cancelled.

Trenholme president

Peggy Trenholme was elected president of the Royal Jubilee Hospital Auxiliary at its annual meeting.

Retiring president Edna Keppy reported a net income from 1979 of about $105,000 while $127,000 from previous savings was contributed towards the purchase of a C.A.T. scanner. Other equipment and furnishings donated in 1979 for the extended care department included two pianos.

Hospital board member Gerry McKay presented Olive MacLennan with a 25-year award for voluntary service.

Lethal diet

TORONTO (CP) — Liquid protein diets are suitable only as a research tool under medical supervision, nutrition and obesity researcher Dr. E. B. Marliss, said.

He said said 40 women between the ages of 25 and 51 have died while following the diet. Autopsies indicated malnutrition, he said.

Use This Home Recipe Plan to Lose Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of bulky unsightly fat right in your own home. Use this recipe plan yourself. It's easy -no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full twice a day and follow the Naran plan.

If your first purchase does not show you the simple, easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't seem to disappear almost like magic from neck, chin, arms bust, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow the easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears-how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Snuff once again trendy for Britons

LONDON (CP) — Napoleon loved it; so did Marie Antoinette. Samuel Johnson swore by it and English painter Joshua Reynolds is reputed to have been so addicted to it that on one occasion he accidentally mixed it with his paints.

And now snuff is once again the trendy stuff on this sceptred isle.

As if in blatant rebellion to shelling out almost 70 pence, (that's almost $2) for a pack of cigarettes, more and more Britons have succumbed to the genteel habit of snuff-taking.

"It's really beginning to gain in popularity now, among people of all ages," says Vivian Rose, proprietor of Smith's Snuff Shop, one of London's last remaining snuff establishments.

"It's healthier, cheaper and a lot more sociable," says the seasoned veteran, smiling blissfully after a sniff of his favorite brand, Sandalwood.

Just a touch is enough explains Rose, adroitly pinching a few grains of the finely ground scented tobacco between thumb and forefinger.

Devout snuff addicts say a few daily sniffs into the nostrils clear the head and prevent colds.

"It's only novice snuff-takers who ever sneeze, simply because they breathe too much into the nose."

Although there are only five remaining snuff mills in Britain where the tobacco is ground and sometimes blended (though most of the blending is done at the snuff shop), snuff sales have increased more than 25 per cent in two years.

"Three-quarters of a million pounds (about $2 million) worth of snuff were produced here last year and the major markets are North America and Germany."

The fact that snuff eliminates the intake of carbon monoxide offers an increasingly attractive alternative for smokers.

The average cigarette contains about 1.75-per-cent nicotine while a few grains of snuff—and you can choose from more than 50 blends or even concoct your own—contain less than one per cent.

The British Medical Journal declared some time ago that although snuff-taking could "beggar the government, it would banish the smoker's cough, reduce the incidence of nicotine poisoning and solace the doctor in his wards."

Dubious smokers say snuff-taking cannot match the satisfaction of smoking a cigarette.

"But it really does give the same satisfaction," argues Rose.

"It's a habit, like smoking, but instead of clouding the air, not to mention your lungs with smoke, snuff-takers just pull out their snuff-box and have a whiff."

An ounce of snuff costs about £1.20—almost $3— but Rose says, "Just see how long it lasts you!"

Yet, even snuff-takers can go to extremes.

"I always think of one regular customer who carries about 30 different snuff boxes on him at any one time. He is a colorful character, to say the least. As he chats, he's constantly patting his pockets, searching for this brand or that brand."

MOMMA

Melvin Maddocks

A maverick friend of ours is getting into the swing of his New Year's resolutions just when everybody else is fading fast and mumbling: "Wait until next year."

Our friend treats the first of February as his New Year's Day, and that, he says only a little smugly, is the whole secret. During the first week of February, he reports, the traffic is wonderfully light on that highway paved with good intentions. A man can shape himself up in comparative privacy, without the usual January feeling of being just another member of an overflow class in leotards at a sort of moral-health salon.

Our February resolver contends that even the climate is favorable. Days are giving light longer, routing those 5 p.m. forces of darkness, and the sun at high noon actually is beginning to look kindly. A fine Puritan nip still is in the air to keep your deservedly troubled conscience alert. But one is not surrounded by winter, like a medieval city under siege, as one is in January, with December behind and February ahead.

February, after all, is the last full month of winter—and what a light-at-the-end-of-the-tunnel comfort lies in that thought!

Furthermore, February starts without the post-holiday letdown that handicaps January, our friend points out. By the twelfth day of Christmas, he claims, good resolutions lack the strength to fly like partridges from a pear tree. Those who believe wassail is the proper prelude to good resolutions are as naive, he scoffs, as dieters who think the way to start is to down a six-course meal first.

No wonder January's resolver tends to operate from extreme positions—desperation or wild overconfidence. February, our friend asserts, is a month not given to such excesses. February is a reasonable month. To prove his point, he will name all the pragmatists born in February, beginning with scientists and inventors: Galileo and Copernicus; Thomas Edison; Charles Darwin; Cyrus McCormick, inventor of the reaper; Chester Carlson, inventor of Xerography; Hudson Maxim, inventor of high explosives.

Well, never mind old Hudson our friend says. But we do get the point, don't we? February is the month when hope and discipline are destined to combine.

If he is pushed for more arguments, our friend will show off his scholarship by explaining that the Latin root for February means "purification" or "expiation"—the very stuff good resolutions are made of.

Our friend's final case for February as good-resolutions month goes back even further into ancient history. All the most successful rituals, he remarks, are in harmony with the seasons. Generally they coincide with events in the life of the farmer. The farmer who makes good resolutions during February is in training for the planting season. The farmer who makes good resolutions in January is only going to apply any new virtues to shoveling snow in February—a necessary but negative task.

What can be done about making January the last month of the year instead of the first? President Carter, our friend notes, is a farmer, and, if he hurries, he might well be the man to proclaim that the New Year, and, in fact, the New Decade, has just begun with February.

Certainly, January 1980 wasn't anything that will be missed.

Our friend would like to suggest further to the president that the Oxford Etymological Dictionary gives "pacification" as an alternative root-meaning for February. Good resolutions are a secular form of prayer, our friend insists, and they should be officially encouraged. A twelfth of the year, he submits, is none too long to devote to "purification" and "pacification."

February doesn't come a month too soon, our friend warns, for it is followed by the month named after the god of war, Mars. For now, our friend is concentrating on getting rid of January, and he does not expect Carter to do anything drastic, like boycott March. At least, not yet.

Sydney Harris

One of my children came to the office to pick me up and, noticing a huge stack of mail on my desk, inquired, "Do you get this every day?" "Not at all," I answered. "They're all in reply to one column I wrote, on religious miracles."

If a writer wants to evoke a heavy response, all he has to do is to deal with two subjects: religion and politics. These are matters that everybody has an opinion on, and somehow cannot restrain from expressing themselves about.

What is interesting is that these are precisely the two subjects about which we ordinarily know the least. Politics is mostly a matter of hope, and religion a matter of faith. Neither can be an objective opinion, much less exact knowledge. We are free to think almost anything about them that we want to.

People vote, not their opinions, but their prejudices and their pocketbooks. And people worship either as they have been conditioned to, or in reaction to such conditioning. Not one person in a thousand is "independent" in these two respects, though many retain the illusion that they have thought things out and made a free decision.

If we were genuinely free, then obviously there would be about as many Buddhists here as there are in the East, and as many Christians there as we have in the West. But, of course, what we are initially exposed to is what we come to believe and to defend as an ultimate truth.

And, politically, if we were free, we wouldn't necessarily find the lower-income people bunched at the Democratic end of the scale, while virtually all the affluent tend to vote Republican. But we are inclined, on the whole, to vote our income-level and then to justify it morally.

Another fascinating aspect of our closed-circuitry on these subjects is that someone writing about either is more likely than not to find himself attacked from both sides at once. The column I adverted to earlier, on religious miracles, was assailed by the pious as being irreverent (which it was not), and by the humanists as being irrational (which it was not).

Likewise, on those rare occasions I comment on politics, the letters come from left and right, accusing me of exactly the opposite biases. Everyone imagines that where he stands is the absolute fulcrum, and all other positions are an unfortunate deviation from the normal. You get a lot of mail that way, but the only answer that will placate them is H. L. Mencken's laconic old rubber-stamp: "Dear Sir: You may be right."

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — Jimmy Durante, a show business saint who talked like a hoodlum, is dead at 86 from pneumonia.

The entertainer who put "shnoz" in the dictionary had been inactive since a stroke in 1972 partially paralyzed him. He entered St. John's Hospital on Jan. 9 suffering from pneumonia and his condition quickly worsened. He died last week.

Durante, one of the great pastime pianists, was a legend of show business, a star of speakeasies, vaudeville, radio, movies, Broadway, Las Vegas and television.

"I gotta million of 'em, Jimmy used to say and he could have been talking about his fans. He was talking, however, about his "dependents." He made millions in his career, but he gave more millions away. He was the softest touch in show business.

I remember one morning at Las Vegas' Desert Inn when Jimmy stepped up to the craps table. Jimmy played craps with pandemonium—even if he couldn't pronounce it. Passing wisecracks as wildly as he rolled the dice, Durante hit two sevens in a row. It quickly won him $500. A moment later it was gone, and not to the casino. Moochers—all perfect strangers to the affable Jimmy—had stripped him clean.

The first moocher's approach was typical: "Jimmy, I'm cleaned out. I need twenty dollars car fare to get back to L.A." Jimmy handed him a couple of $25 chips, knowing full well the only trip the moocher had in mind was to another craps table.

Jimmy used to do as many benefits as Bob Hope. If a parish priest needed another room for a school, he could count on Jimmy to do his act at the church bazaar.

In 1959, Durante played the London Paladium for four weeks at $10,000 a week, but the trip cost him $50,000. He took along 11 people, although only five of them were in the act. The friends had 100 pieces of excess baggage that cost Jimmy a small fortune. "It was probably the foist and last time any of deez guys would get to Europe," Durante explained.

The late Ethel Barrymore once told me a wonderful story about the first time she met Durante at MGM.

"I told Jimmy how much I and my brother Jack enjoyed his work. It was obvious that he had no idea who I was, but he thanked me and said: "If der's anyting I can do for ya, put in a good woid or someting wit da bosses around here, just ask me."

Durante's abuse of the king's English was no affectation. He was the son of an Italian barber in the toughest section of New York's east side. He had to quit school before the eighth grade.

But when the Jesuits who ran Loyola University of Los Angeles needed someone for a television short to extoll the advantages of the school, Jimmy was the only star they asked.

Jimmy's pronuciation was contagious to those around him. Jackie Barnett, his longtime writer, was a college man but went around for years saying, "dilemmia."

"Jimmy used to brag that he was the only comic in television who never used idiot cards.

"No wonder," commented his partner, Eddie Jackson, "he can't read."

Of course, half the charm of Durante on television was to see him get lost in the script.

The late John Wayne made his television debut with Durante in two separate sketches. "Durante was throwing cues in the first sketch, but they were from the second sketch. Here I was standing there with egg on my face while millions watched me. If it had been any other comic, I'd have walked off the stage, but how in the hell can you get mad at Jimmy?"

Durante lasted more than a half-century in show business with virtually the same act, a testament to how much his fans loved him. He always started off with "Ya gotta start each day wid a song" and then he would segue "let me hear dat note" and "stop de music." His finish never varied; it always was, "Good night Missus Kalabash, whereeva ya are."

Who was Mrs. Kalabash? Durante never told anyone, but I found out (after asking him the question at least 100 times) that it was his first wife, who died in 1943.

She was a beautiful singer, Jean Olson, who starred in a nightclub where Jimmy was the piano player. They were married in 1921 and were devoted to each other.

"Jimmy (before his days as a comedian) was known as a piano player's pinao player," the late Eddie Cantor once told me. "He was the greatest ragtime pianist of them all."

During the First World War, Jimmy enlisted in the army where his knowledge of music got him in the band. "Here I was, leadin' a band from Broadway to sell Liberty Bonds. What a war dat was."

Soon after the war, Jimmy met Eddie Jackson, a singer. The two never separated. During Prohibition, a waiter approached Durante and Jackson with the idea of opening a speakeasy. They hired a signpainter who couldn't spell any better than Durante and that's how the famous Club Durant was born. The club was a landark of the Prohibition Era.

Lou Clayton, one of show business's great soft shoe dancers, made the act a trio that became a legend of loyalty and friendship. For many years after the death of Clayton, Durante introduced Eddie Jackson as "Eddie Jackson of Clayton, Jackson and Durante."

In the old days, a visit to Durante's home in Beverly Hills was a never-to-be-forgotten experience. This was before he married the former Marge Little, who survives with a daughter. Cee Cee.

Tories chasing NDP giant

Nanaimo's Miller getting run for his money

By DONNA REIMER
Colonist correspondent

NANAIMO — A few weeks ago, the outcome of the federal campaign in the Nanaimo-Alberni riding looked like a foregone conclusion.

After all, incumbent MP Ted Miller, the NDP's standard-bearer, took the riding by an impressive 4,800-vote margin last May.

It seemed likely that both the Liberals and the Conservatives, in the face of such formidable odds, might be less than enthusiastic about the race.

The Conservatives, however, had different ideas, and during the past month have been waging a campaign that rivals the well-organized NDP for effectiveness.

NOW, SUDDENLY, political observers are becoming a bit more cautious in predicting a rousing NDP victory in Nanaimo-Alberni.

It would take a major switch of voters who went NDP last time, coupled with votes picked up from the Liberals, for Tory Scott Van Alstine to defeat the NDP's Miller.

If that doesn't happen, it won't be for lack of trying.

A SUCCESSION of Conservative cabinet ministers have been visiting the riding, adding their support to Van Alstine. Turnout at the meetings has been good.

And, Nanaimo radio station CHUB's open mike conducted an informal poll which showed the Conservatives well in the lead in Nanaimo.

The 55 per cent of the phone-in votes that went Conservative cannot be called a true poll, because, as the radio station is only too aware, such polls are often the target of concentrated party attention.

HOWEVER, if nothing else, the results reflect the Conservatives' ability to marshal their supporters — a talent recently monopolized by the NDP in this central Island riding.

The riding is no longer such an unknown quantity as it was in the last election. In May, Nanaimo-Alberni was a brand-new riding, carved out of the old Nanaimo-Cowichan the Islands and Comox-Alberni ridings.

The more than 63,000 voters in the riding will have an impressive list of choices when they go to the polling stations Feb. 18. No fewer than six candidates are seeking the seat.

JOINING Miller and Van Alstine in the race are Liberal Cecile McKinnon, of Port Alberni; Allan Benzanson, Marxist-Leninist from Nanaimo; Frank Coffey, Ganges, Rhinocerous party; and Gary Swann of Port Alberni, Communist party.

Only Miller and Van Alstine are repeating last May's election bid. Mrs. McKinnon replaces former Comox-Alberni MP Hugh Anderson in the race, and the Marxist-Leninist and Communist party candidates are newcomers as well.

The Rhinoceros party, on its way to becoming a new, light-hearted institution on the Canadian scene, is running a candidate in Nanaimo-Alberni for the first time.

MRS. McKINNON is the only candidate besides the New Democrat and Tory expected to be a serious threat to Miller or Van Alstine.

The vote totals last May showed Miller leading with 21,304; Van Alstine with 16,475; Liberal Anderson with 10,385; the Communist candidate with 199, and Marxist-Leninist with 74.

Because Mrs. McKinnon is relatively unknown in Nanaimo, observers expect some of the Liberal votes in that city to be up for grabs. She could be expected to make a stronger showing in her hometown Port Alberni, where she has been active in local affairs for more than 20 years.

THE QUESTION that must be bothering both NDP and Conservative organizers in Nanaimo-Alberni these days is exactly what will happen to those Liberal votes. Are they up for grabs and if so who will get them?

Both Nanaimo and Port Alberni are areas of solid strength for the NDP. The party's operations never really cease between elections and officials simply shift into a higher gear when an election rolls around.

Other areas of the riding are harder to predict. Campaign signs on front lawns change noticeably from NDP to Conservative as one drives north along the Island Highway through the retirement areas of Qualicum and Parksville.

THE RIDING stretches from the Nanaimo area in the south to north of Bowser, and extends clear across the Island to the fishing villages of Tofino and Ucluelet and north past Estevan Point.

Mrs. McKinnon has reacted angrily to any suggestion she is not a contender in the Nanaimo-Alberni race.

"I'm in this election to win it," she said.

SHE POINTS to her involvement in Port Alberni affairs to prove that her name is well-known in that city. And, she has been concentrating on Nanaimo, spending many hours in the local Liberal headquarters, to become acquainted with that part of the riding as well.

She defined herself as an active community member, "especially in the areas of education, preventive health and social action."

She served an 11-year stint on the school board. That, she said, was a logical extension of her family duties.

"I'VE ALWAYS been involved in education, having children in schools for 24 years. Today they've all flown the coop, but we're both still quite busy."

She and her husband live on a Port Alberni dairy farm, which has been a family-operated business for 40 years.

The Nanaimo-Alberni race is not her first venture into politics. In 1975, she ran as a Liberal for a provincial seat, but lost.

Self-sufficiency is a theme that runs through Mrs. McKinnon's political beliefs.

SHE APPLIES it to energy, an area she said Canadians should be concentrating on. This would include such alternate energy sources as gasohol, a combination of gas and grain alcohol which is the subject of U.S. research.

PetroCan comes into her energy philosophy, too.

"I definitely want to stop the sale of PetroCan. For once we've got something Canadian, working for Canadians."

Mrs. McKinnon believes the fact that she is bilingual is an asset in her bid for the Nanaimo-Alberni seat, and she reported that she has found a surprising amount of support in the Nanaimo area, in addition to Port Alberni.

NANAIMO is also Ted Miller's town, however, and he's moved right into the heart of the city to be close to the job at hand.

That job is his re-election bid, and 37-year old Miller couldn't be closer to his work, because he, his wife Patti and two young children are now living in an apartment above the Nanaimo NDP headquarters.

The Millers are hoping, of course, that the apartment is only a very temporary absence from the house they lease in Ottawa.

A BIOLOGY and chemistry teacher and counsellor at Nanaimo district senior high school, Miller left his school job in the spring of 1978 to begin work on his campaign that culminated in the May, 1979 victory.

He's riding on that comfortable 4,800-vote margin, but leaving nothing to chance.

In addition to the activities of campaigning, he is keeping up with his constituency work.

THE WORK of an MP, he said, while perhaps not heavier than he expected, is more varied than he realized.

He served as NDP fisheries critic during his six months in Ottawa, and felt he was learning a lot in that role.

His past involvement in SPEC, as well as his biology and chemistry training, made him a natural for the fisheries role, as well as his membership on the fisheries and forestry committee of the house, he said.

MILLER SAID he is concerned about Canada's future in resource sharing.

"If we're to survive as a nation, we've got to establish a feeling of co-operation and sharing of our resources."

Both Miller and the NDP are working hard to make sure he's on hand in Ottawa to have a say in those kinds of decisions.

VAN ALSTINE and the Conservatives are working hard, too.

The Tory, a 37-year old Nanaimo lawyer, likes to remind himself that "even the Montreal Canadiens have losing streaks."

McKinnon

Miller
. . . wide margin

Van Alstine
. . . organization

That's the approach he has taken to the imposing task of beating the Nanaimo-Alberni NDP at their own game — campaigning.

HE'S TAKEN an old political trick for his own in his bid to make himself known. Van Alstine calls it the "burma Shave approach," and it involves appearing at rush hour on well-travelled thoroughfares such as Nanaimo's Pearson Bridge, or the Island Highway in Port Alberni, waving and greeting passersby.

Van Alstine counts each vote switched to him from Miller as a double vote—one more for the Tories, one fewer for the NDP. He knows some voters are planning that kind of switch, but he doesn't know how many.

And, he often ponders the unpredictability of those Liberal voters.

Van Alstine has temporarily given up his five-mile daily jogs for an equally strenuous kind of running, and he admits the work takes a lot of the glamor out of politics.

IT'S ALSO hard on his criminal and family law business and his wife and two young children, he said.

But being a candidate is something he's always wanted to do, and he gravitated to the Conservatives naturally because he agrees with many of their policies, he said.

He is not shy about attacking Miller for his stance on Duke Point, the multi-million-dollar port-industrial development south of Nanaimo that has hit countless snags. He charges Miller has not lent his presence to getting Duke Point on the road.

Van Alstine quotes a familiar slogan to describe his campaign:

"When you're second, maybe you try harder."

Only Nanaimo-Alberni voters know if that's hard enough.

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me;
thy rod and thy staff
they comfort me

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

We would like to thank our many friends and relatives for their warm messages of sympathy in the sudden loss of our beloved son and brother David. Our heartfelt thanks to those sending cards, flowers and food. A special thanks for the contributions to the Boys and Girls Club of the Western Community, the Colwood R.C.M.P., Padre Mills and Sands Chapel of the Heather for their kindness and consideration.

MY FAMILY AND I WISH TO extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the acts of kindness and help given to us in so many different ways when we suddenly lost our beloved husband and father. Also special thanks to Rev. Silvester, the pallbearers and McCalls.
Mrs. Audrey Pears and family.

309 IN MEMORIAM

BROWN - Fanny M.
Nana left us on Feb. 12, 1976
Remembered by her husband David M., and her daughter Shirley, family, Sonny, Jim, Tony, John, Caroline, Gregory and Rob.

COOPER - In loving memory of George L. Cooper, our dad, grandfather and great-grandfather who left us suddenly on Feb. 7, 1977.
We often sit and think of him,
when we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend that grief can call its own.
Like Ivy on the withered oak,
when all other things decay,
Our love for him will still keep green and never fade away.
Sadly missed by Jim, Ardyth, Sandy, Greg Cooper and Dwayne.

HAYES - In loving memory of Stephen, who passed away Feb. 8, 1979.
You will always be remembered and loved.
Nick, Karen, Sean & Steve.

MITCHELL - In loving memory of a dear son, Allan, February 8, 1979.
O happy hours we once enjoyed,
How sweet their memory still,
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill.
The joys we shared together
Are the memories we hold dear,
And the happiness you gave us
Keeps you forever near.
You never really left us
Nor have you travelled far,
Just entered God's beautiful garden
Sadly missed Mother and Stuart and family.

Sharpe, Ron — Our dear husband and father who left us so suddenly on February 8, 1979.
Sadly missed and dearly loved by wife Vi, daughter Lisa and sons Robert, Ron and Shawn.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

Sleep on dear good mother, it has been long years

Since you left our hearts filled with sadness and tears

Yours was a heart that was blithesome
and gay

Scattering sunshine all along the way

You know how we love you and, yes,
love you yet

Though God took you from us, we cannot forget.

Students aim best heckles at main parties

Guffaws greet hopefuls at all-candidates meeting on UVic campus

University of Victoria students saved their greatest guffaws for main-party candidates Thursday as they met on campus for an all-candidates meeting.

Liberal candidate Dr. Gerry Kristianson, a lecturer in the UVic political science department, said it was "quite a thrill to give up the intellectual shackles of the political scientist and speak out in a partisan way," and many of his students seemed to get quite a thrill out of heckling back in a partisan way.

Kristianson called the NDP "the most promising party in Canada" because it makes so many campaign promises, and said the Conservatives can't keep their promises. But he drew the biggest laugh of the afternoon when he referred to the Liberal record as "good, consistent government."

KRISTIANSON called Trident Aircraft of Sidney, whose operation has halted because government grants were withdrawn, as a "unique local opportunity," and attacked the Conservatives for announcing funds to aid the Canadian aerospace industry elsewhere while cutting off funds for Trident.

While he approved of the Conservative action in spiriting American diplomats from Tehran, Kristianson said the fact that so many people in Ottawa knew the Canadian embassy was harboring the Americans could well have become a disaster.

Certain aspects of the Conservative campaign smacked of McCarthy-era "Commie bashing," Kristianson said.

INCUMBENT MP Donald Munro ran into trouble when a student asked him if the Tories had been honest with the people who had voted for them in backing away from issues such as the move of the Canadian embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

"You didn't vote for that," Munro responded.

"How do you know what I voted for?" the student asked.

When Munro said he had not supported the embassy move, the student asked him which parts of the Conservative platform he supported in this campaign.

THE WINTER CAMPAIGN

"Which parts of it are bad?" a heckler threw in.

A Trident Aircraft employee got little support from Munro. The man, who called himself an "ex-Trident employee" is still on the payroll, Munro claimed, a response which his questioner called a "shameful slur."

NOTING THAT the national debt rose from $16 billion to $56 billion in the time that he was in Parliament, Munro said the central issue in the campaign is fiscal responsibility. Voting for the Liberals could result in a government which will "go on burdening you even more," Munro said.

Munro said only the Conservatives have attempted to deal with the increasing gap between Canadian energy consumption and production. Canada has potential energy reserves in the form of coal and tidal power which will require research and development as well as engineering by students such as those in UVic, Munro said.

"You are the people who are going to do it, provided you are not covered with debt."

NDP CANDIDATE Robert Cameron said Canada's lack of research and development has made Canadians "hewers of wood and drawers of water more than ever before."

"We are the most sold-out and bought-out."

Exports of non-renewable resources represent jobs lost in Canada, Cameron said.

"We are the only party that can say we have a platform of retaining control of our resources. If you want to vote for the past, vote for the Liberals. If you want to vote for the present, vote for the Conservatives, and if you want to vote for the future, vote NDP."

Rhinoceros party candidate Robert Maddocks, stuffed rhinoceros at hand, outlined his party's policy on energy pricing (keep gasoline at $1 a gallon, but make the gallons smaller), a "perpetual student" plan (unemployment insurance as long as one is in school, and eligibility for the Canada pension plan after such students reach the age of 65), and tankers along the coast (freeze oil solid, haul it over the Rockies on ski lifts and let it warm up from friction as it slides down the other side).

INDEPENDENT candidate Dr. Philip Ney said Canada would repeat history if it did not learn from the moral taught by Nazi Germany, that those least able to object to dehumanization are the first to go. A eugenics program aimed at the old and the retarded turned into genocide because moral sensibilities had been dulled.

He noted that a German court recently ruled against legal abortions on the grounds that "we will not place a relative value on human life."

Rape, child abuse, child pornography and suicide among young people are increasing rapidly in a society which uses live babies from abortions for medical experiments, and which deliberately allows retarded infants to slowly starve to death, he said.

A PRACTISING psychiatrist, Ney said he was running as an independent candidate because individual action had so far brought only limited results.

The three main parties are all "anti-life" because of their stand on abortion, Ney said.

When questioned about birth control, Ney said he was in favor of it, adding that "I'm the father of four children and could be the father of a lot more."

On other issues, Ney said one reason for the rapid increase in government budgets is the result of people not caring for themselves or others, forcing the government to play a larger role.

HE SUPPORTED aid to Trident, stating that Canada needs high-technology industry.

"There's something about this country. We have something beautiful and just before it's ready to take off we drop it."

City gets message on taxes, councillors smirk at blurb

City comptroller Mason Sheldrick said "I got the message," and the aldermen decided to include it in the 1980 tax notices.

The message referred to by Sheldrick is from the provincial government to municipal property taxpayers. And this is what it says:

"Last year, without provincial government revenue-sharing, your general municipal taxes would have increased by 21.8 per cent to provide similar levels of service."

Inclusion of the message has been prescribed to municipal councils by Municipal Affairs Minister William Vander Zalm, and several mainland municipalities have complained about the procedure.

Not so Victoria aldermen.

There was some tongue-in-cheek reference at Thursday's meeting of city council's finance committee to the possibility of running pictures of the aldermen alongside the message, but no complaints.

Property owners who specialize in paying their taxes at the last-possible minute should keep in mind that payment must be received in the collector's office by 4:30 p.m. July 2.

Any amount owing by that deadline is subject to an immediate four-per-cent penalty.

A further six-per-cent penalty on unpaid taxes will be imposed at the close of the business day on Sept. 29.

Nanaimo turns land speculator

NANAIMO — City council turned land speculator here this week when aldermen gave final approval to the purchase of a $500,000 piece of Newcastle channel property with the avowed purpose of reselling it at a later date.

The property, bought from Shell Oil, was the scene of a disastrous oil storage tank farm fire in the fall of 1977.

Shell put the property up for sale after city zoning prohibited rebuilding of the tank farm, and the city was the highest bidder for the two-acre piece of waterfront property.

Aldermen Ray Brookbank, Dick Winkelman and Gertrude Hall opposed the property purchase, saying the city could exercise control over what development went on the property much more cheaply by a development permit.

They noted that five-year financing of the $500,000 purchase could cost the city as much as $350,000.

And, said Winkelman, the city, as owners of the property, will lose the $13,000 a year Shell Oil was paying in taxes.

Other aldermen voted in favor of the property purchase, to finalize the sale.

The property could be a site for expansion of moorage for the commercial fishing fleet.

Indian tax appeal ruled out

Canadian Press

The B.C. government will not appeal a ruling that native Indians living on reserves are exempt from paying provincial sales tax on electricity and gas, Attorney-General Allan Williams said Thursday.

"We accept the court of appeal judgment as being definitive in its interpretation of the Indian Act which would preclude the province from levying tax against electricity under the Social Services Tax Act," Williams said in an interview.

He said officials in his and the finance ministries are trying to determine whether there is a legal obligation to repay a tax which may have been improperly levied.

Williams said B.C. has never kept records which would identify a person as being a status Indian, "therefore with respect to the accounts which have been rendered over the years by B.C. Hydro, their computer does not recognize who might or might not be a status Indian—so that problem has to be sorted out."

He said that on receipt of the appeals court judgment, instructions were given to the finance ministry to stop taxing electricity sold to status Indians living on reserves "but the same problem exisits: Hydro has to go through its records and try to identify who is or is not a status Indian living on a reserve."

Williams said it is hard to calculate how much would be owing until it is known how many status Indians are living on reserves and for how long they have done so.

He said that if a taxpayer is entitled to a refund the province will establish some way for status Indians to come forward and claim a refund.

Earlier, George Manuel, president of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, estimated the illegal tax totalled $20 million.

This figure, however, was disputed by a government official who said the most they paid in any one year was $90,000 and that was when the sales tax was seven per cent.

He noted the sales tax was three per cent from 1948 to 1954 when it was increased to five per cent. It was increased to seven per cent in 1976, reduced to five per cent in 1978 and to four per cent last year.

The spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said in the early years of the sales tax, the price of electricity was lower than it is now and there were probably fewer Indians living in houses.

"There are only about 6,000 to 7,000 homes affected," he said.

The case revolved around Haida Indian Lilian Brown, who challenged a $4.38 sales tax charge on a Hydro bill to her Queen Charlotte Islands home.

City workers scheduled for managerial training

About 140 city of Victoria employees are scheduled to take part in a five-day training seminar that is to sharpen their managerial and supervisory skills.

The program is offered by the Bob Leflufy Management Training Group. The cost is about $14,000.

The expenditure was endorsed Thursday by Victoria city council's personnel relations committee.

City manager James Bramley said this was the first major step in the direction of staff training.

"I don't think the city could be accused of going overboard in that regard," he said.

In a report to council, personnel director Brian Mader said the city's budget was about $30 million, of which half was for salaries.

"This further emphasizes the need for concentration in the human resources functions within this organization," he said.

Phillips split on superport

Canadian Press

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips says he has mixed feelings about federal Transport Minister Don Mazankowski's offer to pay for a $47.7-million expansion of Roberts Bank superport if B.C. agrees to drop its ownership claim to the facility.

"I am pleased the federal government has made a decision in support of Roberts Bank expansion. I'm not happy they have tied the ownership issue into it," Phillips said Wednesday.

The federal and provincial governments both claim ownership of the Roberts Bank area. The case is currently before the Supreme Court of Canada.

"I'm saying get the damn port built and settle the bloody ownership question at a later date," Phillips said.

If there is further delay in expanding the port facility, B.C. could lose some of its foreign markets to more competitive nations, he said.

Phillips said settlement of the ownership question does not have to be a pre-condition to port expansion as the port is operating well now, even though its ownership is in doubt.

The port now is stretched to full capacity, handling 10 million tonnes of coal a year.

Phillips said B.C. could ship 50 million tonnes of coal a year by 1990 if proper facilities existed.

Mazankowski had said construction would begin this year on two additional terminals about 20 hectares in size and the existing causeway would be widened.

Canadian 'abandoned' in embassy pullout

NELSON, B.C. (CP) — A Montreal man working for a firm which did business in Iran says he was abandoned by the Canadian government when it closed its embassy and smuggled six U.S. diplomats out of the country last month.

Doug Browning, who has been working in Iran since 1973 for the firm of Stadler Hurter, said in Tehran Thursday he is a "diplomatic hostage."

"I'm very angry," he said in a telephone interview with the Nelson Daily News. "I'm angry with the (Canadian) embassy. They phoned me a half hour before the embassy people left for the airport.

"The first week I nearly had a breakdown. I didn't know how they (the Iranians) would react to the embassy closing. Because I'm a little nobody and I'm not big publicity . . . I don't understand how they can leave me here stranded and take six Americans out."

Browning said he stayed behind in Iran when other company employees left late in 1979 after the Canadian government said it could no longer guarantee the safety of Canadians.

Browning was to organize the shipping of the other employees' personal goods back to Canada. The company had a $250 million contract with an Iranian government corporation to build sawmills, plywood plants, pulp mills and to do other forestry work near the Caspian sea.

Since that time, Browning said, he has not been given an exit visa, although he said his life is not in any danger.

"I'm not free to come home to Canada," he said. "I've been a hostage for six months, but a hostage with the freedom to travel around Iran."

Stadler Hurter went bankrupt after leaving Iran. The name and assets have been bought by a German firm which says it has been unable to get Browning out of the country.

Browning said he was in constant contact with the Canadian embassy for six months. Embassy officials were unable to persuade the Iranians to let him go, he said.

Browning said that although the firm went bankrupt, it did not inform Iranian officials, who continued to consider him a company representative and wanted him to remain. In addition, "there is a tax problem which is very involved."

He said that finally, the president of Iran's industrial development corporation "had written to police to say that he had no objection now to me leaving Iran."

"The morning I was picking up the letter was the morning the story broke in the local papers about what the Canadians—'the terrible Canadians,' as they say—did.

"I went to the office and they said 'We're sorry, but we have to withdraw that letter and from now on your're considered political.' Being political they

Ottawa boots another Soviet diplomat

Nobody hotter than Kotter at table

Comedian Gabe Kaplan, star of television's Welcome Back Kotter, pulls in $190,000 he won in three-day poker game during Amarillo Slim Poker Classic at Sahara-Reno hotel-casino in Reno, Nev. He beat 38 other contestants, each of whom posted $10,000 to get into the super-high-stakes game.

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is expelling another Soviet official in retaliation for the expulsion of Col. Harold Gold, a Canadian military attache, from Moscow, the external affairs department announced Thursday.

The department said in a statement the government has reduced the Soviet embassy's commercial section by one person. That means V.F. Trofimov, a member of that section, will be forced to leave in two weeks, the statement said.

Retaliation promised

This is the latest move in a series of expulsions beginning with the government's decision Jan. 21 to kick out three Soviet embassy officials for spying.

Moscow responded by ordering out Gold last week. Gold, who returned to Ottawa Wednesday, said Soviet charges he was spying are absurd.

External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald has been promising retaliation for some days.

The external affairs department said the expulsion of Trofimov "should not be construed as indicating that Mr. Trofimov was engaged in activities incompatible with his status in this country."

"The measures have been adopted solely in retaliation for the unwarranted expulsion of Col. Gold," the department said.

The statement said MacDonald warned the Soviet Union that Canada would retaliate if Russia expelled any Canadian diplomat for spying because Canadian diplomats in Moscow are not engaged in espionage.

Gold's activities "were fully in accord with his position as Canadian defence attache in Moscow."

"Therefore the Canadian government regards his expulsion as completely unjustified," the department said.

The latest move reduces the authorized number of Soviet diplomats in Canada to 63. The actual number of Soviet officials in this country is 60 because Moscow has not yet replaced the three military officers kicked out Jan. 21 for spying.

Canadian diplomats in Moscow now total 38.

The Conservative government has been lambasting the Soviet Union during the Feb. 18 election campaign, particularly since the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. But MacDonald declared Jan. 21 the decision to expel the three Soviet military officers for spying was not linked to the Afghanistan crisis.

Clark savors Trudeau oil slip

THE WINTER CAMPAIGN

● Nanaimo-Alberni assessed, Page 29; other campaign stories, Pages 2 and 17

OTTAWA (CP) — Pierre Trudeau has stirred up more confusion about how much oil prices would rise under a Liberal government with a statement his aides wrote off Thursday as a slip of the tongue.

The Liberal leader said in a television interview Wednesday that the increase would be less than $3 a barrel if he is elected prime minister Feb. 18.

But aides travelling with Trudeau, after initially denying the statement, scrambled to listen to the tape and come up with an explanation.

"It was a slip," said Patrick Gossage, Trudeau's press spokesman in Prince George, B.C. "We haven't changed our position."

Gossage explained the slip this way:

The Conservatives have proposed a $4-a-barrel increase for domestic oil this year. But the price went up $1 on Jan. 1, leaving $3 to go.

That was the $3 to which Trudeau referred when he said an increase under a Liberal government would be less than $3 a barrel this year, said Gossage, saying the party is still committed to a total increase of less than $4 this year.

In Thunder Bay, Ont., Prime Minister Clark lashed out at the apparent confusion over the Liberals' statements on oil prices.

He told a campaign rally of about 500 that the Liberals had no less than four official spokesmen on energy matters. Each Liberal, he said, had a different figure for how much oil would increase this year.

"No wonder they can't explain their energy policies to Canadians," Clark said. "They can't explain it to themselves."

Trudeau, who has hedged on giving specific figures, made the statement after repeated demands to name a price during a CFTO-TV interview taped last week and broadcast Wednesday night.

Hopeful U.S. shelving Iran squeeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, encouraged by signs that Iran's new government is anxious to end the American hostage crisis, announced Thursday it would not formally impose long-promised economic sanctions against that country.

State department spokesman Hodding Carter explained the policy reversal by saying that the U.S. administration did not want to take this step while diplomatic activity continued.

He did not elaborate. However, reports have circulated in recent days indicating that Iran would be willing to release the 50 American hostages held by Moslem militants at the U.S. embassy in Tehran in exchange for the establishment of a UN-sponsored international tribunal to investigate alleged crimes of the deposed shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Carter to urge listing women on draft rolls

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will call for the registration of women for the military draft, White House officials said Thursday.

The White House scheduled an announcement for today detailing the president's plans for the entire draft registration program.

Officials who asked not to be identified said Carter decided to include women in the program spite a warning from Speaker Thomas O'Neill of the House of Representatives that the measure would not pass the Congress.

The president probably will limit registration to persons 19 and 20.

Carter announced plans last month in his State of the Union messsage to resume draft registration, citing an increasing military threat from the Soviet Union.

Although he been silent on the question of whether he would include women, he had previously taken the position that any such program should include women.

There are about 150,000 women in the American military, out of a force of more than two million. However, women are banned by law from combat.

Japanese curb trade credits for Russians

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan decided Thursday to stop giving new trade credits to the Soviet Union in retalitation for the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, government sources said.

Financial sources estimated that the move means a freeze of about $1.4 billion in government credits originally earmarked for two-way trade and Soviet development projects.

The decision came after a meeting Thursday between Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira and senior officials of the foreign, international trade and industry and finance ministries, government officials said.

"It can't be helped if the measure will affect Japanese-Soviet trade," a senior Foreign Ministry official told reporters.

Most of the two-way trade between Japan and the Soviet Union is financed by credits extended by the government's Export-Import Bank.

Foreign ministry sources said Foreign Minister Saburo Okita will brief U.S. Ambassador Mike Mansfield Friday.

The government has also decided to boycott the Moscow Olympic games as a means to "express displeasure" over the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Another riot rips Oakalla

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 120 prisoners smashed windows, furniture and water pipes overnight in a demonstration in the west wing of Oakalla prison in Burnaby.

Prison security official Lloyd Linn said the prisoners returned to their cells Thursday morning after meeting with a Vancouver lawyer.

Linn said the prisoners were upset about disciplinary measures and lack of leisure time. He said it is not known if charges will be laid against the prisoners.

Linn said several prisoners were cut by glass when windows were broken.

Armed guards stood watch outside the minimum-security institution during the disturbance. The disturbance was similar to one that ended Wednesday when guards turned a fire hose on 28 prisoners who had wrecked furniture in the south wing.

Barry Sadler, of the B.C. Corrections Service, said the prison administration had agreed to bolster the prison's legal library, to provide more flexibility in recreation and to loosen clothing regulations.

He said warden Henry Bjarnson had agreed to give more consideration to allowing an independent presence on the prison's internal discipline board that punishes infractions by prisoners.

"The only major issue of contention left is the visiting situation," Sadler said. "As I understand it, the inmates feel there should be less security and supervision during visits."

Poll nudges queen to abdicate

LONDON (Reuter) — Most Britons believe Queen Elizabeth should abdicate within the decade and allow Prince Charles to become king, an opinion poll published Thursday says.

Seven out of every 10 people asked by the newsmagazine Now said the queen eventually should stand down. Many were in favor of her abdicating in 1986 when she will be aged 60.

Only one person in 10 believed the queen, crowned in 1953, should abdicate immediately.

Five months ago, a national poll showed that 40 per cent of the population believed the queen should give up her throne.

The change in public opinion is apparently due to the growing popularity of 31-year-old Prince Charles. He was the most popular member of the royal family with 70 per cent of the votes.

The poll showed that most Britons are fiercely loyal to the monarch.

Swiss charge UBC professor

VANCOUVER (CP) — University of British Columbia professor Cyril Belshaw has been charged in Switzerland with the murder of his wife, Vancouver lawyer Harry McLaughlin said Thursday.

McLaughlin said his client also was charged with fraud.

The well-known anthropology professor was extradited by French authorities to Switzerland late last week. McLaughlin said under Swiss law an extradited person must be charged formally or be released.

Betty Belshaw's nude, decomposed body was found wrapped in plastic bags beside a road in Switzerland last March.

The couple had been living in Switzerland when Mrs. Belshaw, 59, disappeared in early February.

McLaughlin said the investigation into the death was continuing. The process is different from Canada where the crown normally would complete its investigation before laying charges.

Under Swiss law, the chief examining magistrate is required to report to a Swiss tribunal every two weeks to justify keeping Belshaw in jail.

Belshaw has been under arrest in France since November when Paris police stopped him as he stepped off plane to attend an academic conference.

Belshaw is a former chairman of the UBC anthropology department and editor-in-chief of Current Anthropology, an international journal.

Bypass, crossing topics no water under bridge

By RUTH McKELLAR
Colonist correspondent

COURTENAY — The controversy over the 17th Street bridge crossing and the Island Highway bypass has come up for more discussion by council.

Ald. Ian Potts produced a newsletter from the highways ministry dated May 2, 1978, and a copy of a letter from a prominent spokesman for the Comox Valley Citizens Traffic Advisory Committee.

The letter and press release had been circulated to council prior to the meeting.

When the topic came up for discussion, members of the media were unable to follow the conversation until copies were made available later

Potts read from the May press release, quoting the statement which read. "The minister, in announcing his decision (to proceed with the 17th Street bridge) has postponed a highway bypass around Courtenay on the grounds that such a bypass would carry minimal traffic and that few through trips wish to bypass Courtenay."

Potts asked council for its understanding of the statement while the letter from the CVCTAC said: "If the intent of this news release can be interpreted other than that the 17th Street site will postpone the inland bypass, then I would appreciate receiving your comments to that effect."

Aldermen, however, refused to become upset over the more-than-year-old press release, which in fact contained information which has since been put into effect in regard to bridge design.

Ald. Fred Pisto said the information was supposition on the part of the writer, named as D.W. Shepherd, public information officer.

"The minister probably never saw the release," he said.

Meanwhile, the Comox-Strathcona Regional District has received a letter signed by Fraser, indicating that some preliminary work on a bypass has been done and a consulting firm will be hired to determine some costs and designs.

Potts has been a member of the CVCTAC and was the one who presented a brief opposing the 17th Street site when Fraser attended a public meeting on the issue held here last year.

According to the 1978 press release, the bypass was not recommended "because we found it would only carry some 4,000 vehicles a day. The 5th Street bridge is currently carrying 24,000 vehicles daily, during summer and the 17th Street bypass will tend to split this total, consequently providing a solution to this traffic problem for many years."

The statment, made in quotes, was attributed to the minister.

Aldermen appeared to feel the letter was so old that it no longer had any bearing on the issue and that reference to postponing the bypass was in reference to construction of the bridge at this time.

Council took no action on the matter.

Nanaimo

Senior voice being heard

NANAIMO — A province-wide drive for changes in old age pensions was brought to the attention of city council here this week.

Pat Barron, representing the Nanaimo Justice Council, asked the city for up to $5,000 for the campaign for more equitable old age pension rules.

That sum would include a $2,000 grant plus a $3,000 matching grant. Barron said the justice council was hoping to raise $15,000 in Nanaimo.

Money would go for legal research, secretarial assistance and advertising.

The justice councils are spearheading the drive for changes in both federal and provincial regulations.

He cited as examples the decreased income an old-age pensioners gets when he has income from investment such as from proceeds from the sale of a house.

A pensioner who sells his home for $30,000, and receives 10 per cent interest on that sum per year, would receive $3,000 interest, just about enough to cover the cost of rental accommodation, Baron said.

But the kicker is, he said, that the government will reduce that pensioner's income to $207.18 total guaranteed income supplement and old age pension instead of the standard $332.18 a month.

"Who can exist on a monthly sum of $207?" Barron asked. "Is this the reward for thrift in the free entreprise system?"

He also said that the last raise received by pensioners was the "princely sum" of $3 a quarter. He compared this to public servants who were making in the $25,000 to $35,000 range and asking for a $5,000 annual increase.

"This is a scandal—a disgrace to human society," Barron said.

The request has been referred to the city's budget committee.

Barron is a well-known figure in Nanaimo, having in past years unsuccessfully run against Mayor Frank Ney.

Head of education looks at deflated gymnasium

By DONNA REIMER
Colonist correspondent

NANAIMO — Provincial Education Minister Brian Smith got a look at a deflated gymnasium and a controversial route when he visited the Malaspina College campus here this week.

Smith, on his first official visit to the college, was acquainted with the college's two most publicized problems—the collapsed air-support gymnasium and the proposed north-south arterial road.

The gym collapsed Jan. 11, during a snow, rain and windstorm.

College officials this week outlined to Smith their desire to have the gymnasium replaced with a more permanent structure.

Smith said he would consider the gym roof disaster akin to a fire loss, and agreed the college should be looking at a more permanent type of replacement.

The college board recently approved spending up to $15,000 to reinflate the gym, so that engineers could get a look at the damage that lies under the deflated roof.

However, the board would still have to decide if it wanted to use the reinflated gym, even temporarily.

The city building inspector would also have to decide if he would allow the structure to be used.

Reports that the roof collapsed in a matter of seconds have caused concern for college officials, who had previously been told that any loss of air support would come gradually.

On the north-south arterial, Smith backed up the college board in its stand against the route, which cuts close to the campus, and would separate the college and Nanaimo District senior high school.

Meanwhile, a new program at Malaspina College, set to start next fall, will concentrate on producing technicians who will be in big demand in this enery-consicous era.

Called Energy Systems Technology, the new two-year program will train technicians who will be able to design and supervise installation of both conventional and solar heating units as well as energy-saving devices and measures.

The start-up of the new program was announced in Nanaimo this week in a joint statement from Smith and Malaspina board chairman Beryl Bennett.

The program is expected to enroll 24 students the first semester, and already has 40 applications on file.

The program is the first of its kind in B.C. and one of the first in Canada.

Smith said that Malaspina was to be congratulated on the introduction of the innovative and timely program and he was pleased the ministry of education could play a direct role in its development.

The program was first proposed in the fall of 1977.

Since then, college officials have been involved in a feasibility study, and drawing up the program details.

The thought was first to have a solar energy program, but because there might not be enough demand to justify a program simply for solar energy, it was decided a more general energy conservation program should be initiated.

The program is designed for students who have graduated from Grade 12, or for people who are already trades people who do not have Grade 12 graduation but have aptitutde and interest.

Smith was in Nanaimo on his first official visit to the Malaspina campus since he was appointed education minister in November.

He also announced that the education ministry has given approval for a $750,000 building to replace the college's inadequate and outdated welding facilities.

The new shop will have 12,000 square feet of space, and will help meet the great demand for the college's welding training and welding upgrading programs, noted Bennett.

Courtenay council

Shopping mall triggers additional talks

By RUTH MCKELLAR
Colonist correspondent

COURTENAY — Dominion Construction has come back to council for further discussion in regard to a proposed shopping centre, which would be constructed on the north side of the 5th Street bridge.

The company competed with Commerce Capital about four years ago for the right to proceed with a shopping centre.

Commerce got the nod from council and built the Driftwood Mall to the south of the city on the Island Highway.

However, the meeting between council and Bob Bental of Dominion was made public only after members of the media raised some questions about the current state of any talks.

Mayor Robert McPhee admitted a meeting had taken place and a presentation had been made by the company.

Later, council agreed that the presentation had been a very comprehensive one dealing with many aspects of the proposal including traffic flow, population increase and a market analysis.

McPhee said the presentation had been taken under advisement and a decision would be made at a later date.

However, at first he said no specific request had been made by Dominion but later agreed that the company had asked that "city council approve commercial development of our property."

The land would require rezoning from R-2 to commercial and be included in the community plan now being revised.

When the revision is complete, the community plan goes to public viewing, then to public hearing, allowing an opportunity for much public input.

The land owned by the company is located at the intersection of Ryan Road and the new alignment of the Island Highway, or about 700 feet east of the present Island Highway.

The shopping centre site totals 17.67 gross acres and has about 900 feet of frontage along Ryan Road and 820 feet along the new alignment.

According to the company presentation given to the media after the council meeting, "important locational criteria are not equalled at any other shopping centre in the Courtenay area."

Some of the criteria named were that it would be located at the principal traffic intersection serving Courtenay-Comox areas, centrally located to serve population of both areas, located at a competitive distance from other neighborhood and community shopping centres, is within a three or four-minute drive to the city centre and "is of adequate size to provide a distinctive commercial centre, which provides both a quality development and ensures the protection of the municipal tax revenues."

The proposal named only one community shopping centre, that of the Driftwood Mall, and located four neighborhood shopping centres, two in Comox and two in Courtenay.

Population figures indicated by the proposal showed that from 1951 to 1976 the Courtenay-Comox area population has increased at a compounded annual growth rate of four per cent.

In the market analysis, the proposal indicated an analysis of department store sales would show there is sufficient potential for the net addition of up to 80,000 square feet of department store floor area.

However, no name was suggested, although many rumors have circulated in the Comox Valley in regard to the store name.

Included in the plan is the possibility of a 150-room motor motel and restaurant, which according to the proposal could be built during the first phase.

"It is estimated that the total cost of the shopping centre would be $10 million plus the costs of the proposed motor motel and restaurant complex estimated at $4.5 million," the proposal stated.

The scale of development was estimated to generate annually municipal real estate taxes of $225,000 to $275,000 on completion.

A detailed traffic study was done by Zoltan Kuun Associates and completed in August of 1979.

The report indicated that Phase 1 of the development would be manageable with only minor improvements to Ryan Road, such as left turn lanes at the access points and at Highway 19.

Phase 2, however, would require widening Ryan Road to four lanes, plus turning lanes.

During discussion on the proposal council was asked when a decision would be made but no firm answer was received.

The mayor said council did not want to be rushed into an answer while Ald. George Cochrane said "no rush—maybe 1983 or '84."

Council was also asked if the decision would be made in public after the mayor indicated the decision might be announced by means of a press release, but no commitment was made.

A proposal submitted by Royal Oak Holdings, to build a shopping centre in east Courtenay, was held in private and no announcement made until a question was raised by the media.

Council will consider each request on its own merit, was the opinion of aldermen.

Buying gains favor

NANAIMO — City council turned land speculator here this week when aldermen gave final approval to the purchase of a $500,000 piece of Newcastle channel property with the avowed purpose of reselling it at a later date.

The property, bought from Shell Oil, was the scene of a disastrous oil storage tank farm fire in the fall of 1977.

Shell put the property up for sale after city zoning prohibited rebuilding of the tank farm, and the city was the highest bidder for the two-acre piece of waterfront property.

Aldermen Ray Brookbank, Dick Winkelman and Gertrude Hall opposed the property purchase, saying the city could exercise control over what development went on the property much more cheaply by a development permit.

They pointed out that five-year financing of the $500,000 purchase could cost the city as much as $350,000.

And, said Winkelman, the city, as owners of the property, will lose the $13,000 a year Shell Oil was paying in taxes.

Other aldermen voted in favor of the property purchase, to finalize the sale.

The property could be a site for expansion of moorage for the commercial fishing fleet.

Cowichan looks at new hotel proposal

DUNCAN — Should a hotel complex be built on the Cowichan Valley's newly-developed ball park and recreational area adjacent to the Cowichan Community Centre?

North Cowichan council and for that matter, all residents of the Cowichan Valley, are asking that question.

The site for the hotel complex was suggested to council at its recent meeting by developer Joe Silva.

A similar proposal by Silva for a hotel complex on land in the flood plain area of Somenos Flats was rejected by council in December.

North Cowichan shares ownership of the recreational-area tract with the city of Duncan and the Cowichan Exhibition Society.

For this reason a meeting will be arranged between the three owners to discuss the matter further.

Silva, in his brief to council, said that "it is our understanding since the Somenos Flats was not an appropriate site, that the council has indicated that it is prepared to help us secure a further site which may be more acceptable to the public at large."

"Since Dec. 19, 1979, we have been endeavoring to locate an alternative site which has highway exposure and is also serviced with sewer and water."

"We are of the view that the only alternative left to us is to consider a site facing the Trans-Canada Highway, which we understand is owned by the municipality, of approximately 5.36 acres."

The triangular piece of land bordering the Trans-Canada Highway was recently developed and is currently used as the area ball park.

Mayor Graham Bruce questioned council if "in view of the fact that this property is parkland, council would want to discuss the matter at all."

Ald. Paul Osborne said: "There is first a political decision to be made as to whether any changes can be made, before any development could go ahead there."

Ald. Rex Hollett, who favored the previous hotel proposal, said: "We've all established that we need a hotel somewhere in this vicinity for a convention centre.

"We realize ball parks and recreational areas have been developed at this site, but we should see what this developer's proposal is. If we could develop ball parks at this location, we can always develop them somewhere else."

Council agreed to hold a joint meeting composed of full councils.

Council approved the preparation of a $700,000 bylaw to allow construction of the first phase of a sewage treatment plant for Chemainus.

Municipal engineer Earl Stinson said the grinders would be underground, the treatment plant would be above ground but would be screened by trees.

He said that this would eliminate the parking adjacent to the boat ramp.

Council was informed by Stephen Rogers, chairman of the Environment and Land Use Committee, that the Cowichan Estuary Task Force is expected in late March, after which discussion will be convened.

In a letter to council, Rogers said: "Consultant reports dealing with log handling alternatives for the estuary and with hydrology and hydraulics of the lower river and estuary are currently being integrated as part of the over-all draft report as a basis for final review by the task force.

"This information forms the final component of the study which will be submitted to ELUC.

"Once my ELUC colleagues and I have had an oportunity to review the findings, I will look forward to convening discussions with the district of North Cowichan, the Cowichan Valley Regional District and other appropriate agencies."

Council agreed to a request from the Cowichan Exhibition Society to support its application to the B.C. Lottery Fund Committee for a grant in order that new public washroom facilities could be constructed at the north end of the exhibition property and so serve the ball park and grass hockey field users as well.

Canada's puck medal chance hinges on game with Finns

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (CP) — Canada returns to Olympic hockey after a 12-year hiatus Tuesday, and while coach Tom Watt is predicting a medal-winning performance, the very fact Canada is icing a team at the 1980 Winter Games provides the former University of Toronto mentor with a great deal of satisfaction.

"There's no question about it, we're here to win a medal, and if we don't, we're going to be disappointed," Watt said in a recent interview.

"But the most important thing, whether we do well or not, is that we're back in Olympic hockey and it gives every young Canadian something to shoot at other than the National Hockey League."

The last time Canada participated in Olympic hockey was at Grenoble, France, in 1968. The team was crushed 5-0 by the Soviet Union in the final game, and although it still managed to win the bronze medal, its performance was hard to stomach for a Canadian public weaned on hockey, and the pullout followed.

Watt, who shares the coaching duties with Clare Drake and Lorne Davis, realizes that if Canada is to win a bronze medal — the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia are strong favorites to capture the top two prizes — the Calgary-based squad must master the larger international-size ice surface, which is 14 feet wider than the conventional North American rink.

"The big ice surface is very important because at home in Calgary, we played just great," he said. "We were 12-2-1 and didn't lose an international game on the small surface. But we haven't been as good, in terms of wins, on the bigger surfaces."

The Olympic team, minus eight players who took part in the Izvestia tournament in Moscow as part of a Canada Selects squad, lost all four games at a pre-Olympic tournament here in December on the international-size rink. Then, in January, they dropped 6-3 and 5-1 decisions to the Moscow Selects and defeated the Japanese national team 1-0 during a series of games in Japan.

But Watt feels the additional exposure to the big ice surface in Japan was a great help and believes the youthful squad, which averages under 22 years of age and is comprised almost exclusively of collegiate and junior players, is peaking at just the right time.

Canada's road toward a medal is a somewhat smoother one than that faced by such countries as Sweden and the United States. The 12 countries in the tournament have been divided into two pools. Each team will play the other five clubs in its division once, with the top two in each pool advancing to the medal round.

Canada's preliminary-round opponents will be the Soviet Union, Finland, Poland, Japan and the Netherlands, while the other division is comprised of Czechoslovakia, Sweden, the United States, West Germany, Norway and Romania.

Therefore, if form charts mean anything, Canada's chance at a medal would appear to hinge on its Feb. 15 game with Finland.

"Our key game is against Finland," agrees Watt. "They have an excellent team, they finished second at Izvestia and they have scouted us extensively because they also know it's the key game for them."

The squad currently boasts 24 members, three over the Olympic limit. Each country must file its lineup 12 hours prior to its opening game and Watt promises to wait until the last minute.

"We have to name 20 players and the 21st player is a third goaltender. He can only play in the case of an injury to one of the other goaltenders and then the one he replaces cannot return to competition."

Watt harbors no doubt that the Canadian team is prepared, both mentally and physically.

"The cohesion here is just great. After all, everybody gave up a lot, they've trained hard. We're fit.

"There's no team in Lake Placid, or anywhere in the world, that's going to outskate us. Tactically, we're well prepared. We've seen a lot of the teams that we're going to play and we know the adjustments we'll have to make."

If the pre-Olympic tournament in December was any indication, the one big adjustment needed is to find the scoring touch. Despite outshooting their opposition 109-100, the Canadians were outscored 20-5 in the four tournament games.

"If we have one worry, it's that we've come up a little cold around the net on certain occasions," says Watt. "That will have to change."

Lever dealt to Flames

VANCOUVER — Vancouver Canucks have traded captain Don Lever, an eight-year veteran of the National Hockey League club, and winger Brad Smith to Atlanta Flames.

In return, the Canucks will get centre Ivan Boldirev and leftwinger Darcy Rota. They will join the Canucks for their next game, Saturday against the Canadiens in Montreal.

The trade was announced Thursday after the Canucks had scored a 4-1 win over Philadelphia Flyers.

Lever, 27, third among Canucks' scorers with 21 goals and 17 assists this season, joined the club for the 1972-73 campaign. He was a No. 1 junior draft pick from the Niagara Falls Flyers.

In his seven-plus seasons with Vancouver, Lever scored 186 goals.

Smith, nearly 22, has spent the last two seasons, his first two in pro hockey, shuttling between the Canucks and their Central Hockey League affiliate in Dallas. He was a fith-round draft choice in 1978.

Rota, 27, was born in Vancouver but grew up in Prince George. He was chosen in the draft's first round by Chicago Black Hawks, playing his first season in 1973-74 after a standout junior career with Edmonton Oil Kings.

He was traded to Atlanta with Boldirev and Phil Russell for Tom Lysiak, Pat Ribble, Harold Phillipoff — also now Canuck property — Greg Fox and Miles Zaharko last March.

His best year for Chicago was 1976-77 when he scored 24 goals and drew 22 assists. He had 10 goals and eight assists in 44 games for the Flames.

Canucks surprise Flyers with upset at Spectrum

How do you figure the Vancouver Canucks?

They go winless in 11 straight games. They get one of a possible 12 points in a six-game home stand and lose at home to Colorado Rockies.

But then they go on the road and win two of their first three games and beat the No. 1 team in the National Hockey League before one of the most vocally partisan crowds anywhere.

Goalkeeper Gary Bromley made his record 2-0 since being recalled from the minors as the Canucks upset the Philadelphia Flyers 4-1 before a crowd of 17,077 Thursday at the Spectrum.

● Complete summaries on Page 14

In other games: Buffalo Sabres padded their Vezina Trophy lead with a 9-0 shutout of visiting Pittsburgh Penguins; Boston Bruins outgunned Toronto Maple Leafs 8-6 at Boston; Montreal Canadiens edged Colorado 4-3 at the Forum; and New York Islanders defeated visiting Los Angeles Kings 4-1.

The Canucks win over the Flyers rates as thebiggest upset of the season.

The Flyers went into the game with a 35-3-13 record, the best in the league, and they they were unbeaten at home this season. The Canucks were 16-28-8 and had won only two of their last 15 games.

The Flyers, who already set a record this season by going unbeaten in 35 straight games, were one game away from tying the league record for going unbeaten at home. Montreal went unbeaten in 28 home games between Dec. 18, 1977 and Feb. 23, 1978. Philadelphia was unbeaten in 26 home games this season and had won its final league game of last season.

Their last league loss at the Spectrum was April 5 last year when they were edged 3-1 by the Islanders.

Both of the Canucks previous wins in 1980 came on the road. They beat Colorado a month ago and opened the current three-game road trip with a 5-4 win over Minnesota North Stars.

They lost 3-0 at Buffalo but because of the all-star break had three days rest — except all-star pickup Lars Lindgren — before facing the Flyers.

Bromley, who had been playing for Dallas of the Central League since the start of the season, was in the nets against Minnesota and kicked out 26 shots against the Flyers.

He played 38 games for the Canucks last season but Glen Hanlon won the No. 1 job this year and Bromley lost to Curt Ridley in the battle for backup honors.

Bromley was at his best in the second and the third periods when the Flyers held a 20-14 edge in shots.

Rick Vaive, the Canucks No. 1 draft choice in 1979, lived up to his press clippings for a change.

Stan Smyl put the Canucks ahead 1-0 with a powerplay goal late in the first period and Vaive made it 2-0 with a slapshot at 12:45 of the second period.

Vaive, a six-foot, 180 pound rightwinger, played as an underage for Birmingham Bulls of the World Hockey Association last year and scored 26 goals, picked up 33 assists and took 248 minutes in penalties.

In his first 42 games for Vancouver he had only 10 goals, 18 assists and 98 minutes in penalties.

Rick MacLeish scored a shorthanded goal at 19:39 of the second period to make it 2-1 and the Flyers had the pressure on early in the final frame.

But Bromley held the fort and Thomas Gradin made it 3-1 at 8:36 of the third. Vaive put the game away with an empty-net goal at 19:16.

Phil Myre, who has been in goal for all four Philadelphia losses this season, stopped only 16 shots.

At Buffalo, Don Edwards stopped 25 shots as the Sabres posted their second straight shutout. Bob Sauve did the honors in the 3-0 win over the Canucks.

The Sabres have now lead the Vezina chase with 141 goals allowed in 54 games for a 2.61 goals-against-average while the Flyers are next with 152 goals in 52 games for a 2.92 average.

Boston's Vezina hopes suffered a setback as Gerry Cheevers gave up the six goals to Toronto. Boston has given up 158 goals in 53 games for 2.98 average.

Cougars overpower Bruins

Victoria Cougars and Brandon Wheat Kings tuned up for a Saturday meeting with similar victories Thursday.

Western Division teams were the victims in both cases as the Cougars downed last-place New Westminster Bruins 6-2 in a Western Hockey League game at New Westminster and the Wheat Kings defeated the Breakers by the same score at Seattle.

The Cougars and Wheat Kings play 8:30 p.m. Saturday at Memorial Arena. It will be the fourth and final meeting of the clubs in league play this season and although the Cougars hold a 2-1 edge they lost the last encounter 5-4 in overtime at Brandon.

The Wheat Kings have been one of the most improved teams in the Eastern Division in recent weeks.

The defending champions got off to a poor start and were struggling most of the season but have been winning more than they've been losing since acquiring strong man Boris Fistric from New Westminster Bruins.

The win over Seattle put them in a three-way tie for fourth place in the East with Lethbridge Broncos and Medicine Hat Tigers.

The Cougar victory moved them to within a point of first-place Portland Winter Hawks in the West while with the loss the Bruins inched closer to mathamatical elimination from the playoffs.

Bruins and Cougars played to a scoreless draw in the first period, Bob Jansch made it 1-0 at 3:14 of the second and Greg Adams put the Cougars ahead 2-0 at 11:28.

Andy Ristau got the Bruins close with a powerplay goal at 16:37 of the second but the Cougars exploded with goals 16 seconds apart early in the third period. Adams scored his 44th goal of the season at 5:39 and Bud McCarthy scored at 5:55.

Bob Smith and Daryl Coldwell also scored for the Cougars while Randy Wickware got the other New Westminster goal.

By TOM KEYSER

Most coaches never admit casting their thoughts beyond the next game. But Kathy Shields is different.

With the Canada West women's basketball conference title all but tucked in her hip pocket, the second-year University of Victoria Vikettes coach will, in unguarded moments, concede she's plotting strategy for the conference playoffs.

Shields' foresight stops short of the nationals. She insists it's first things first.

That means ensuring her unbeaten ballplayers don't get sloppy this weekend, when Lethbridge Pronghorns arrive at McKinnon Gym for games tonight and Saturday. Their male counterparts engage Victoria Vikings in a men's doubleheader both nights.

Shields is willing to share her reflections on a local theory which contends Vikettes inevitably collapse in the nationals. During their phenomenal 60-0, three-year CWUAA undefeated streak, Vikettes were shot down each time at the Canadian tournament.

Then last year, after Shields replaced Mike Gallo, Vikettes placed second in conference but, as a wild-card entry, endured all the way to the final.

Now, with the team 29-0, a trip to the CIAU tournament in Halifax next month seems inevitable.

Will they win it? Or won't they?

"I don't really want to look past the playoffs," Shields said prior to Wednesday's practice.

"But I don't think people understand how tough it is to win the national championship. Some people don't realize how many great teams we have in Canada.

"It's not fair to criticize UVic for not winning."

Top-ranked Vikettes must be wary of No. 2 Bishop's, No. 3 Dalhousie (host team for the nationals) and Guelph, ranked fourth in the CIAU.

"I do think we'll be there, if not as conference champs then as a wild card. With all due respect, I think we're the best in the west."

At 14-0 in-conference, Vikettes nearest competition is fifth-ranked Calgary Dinnies, 10-4. UVic has beaten Dinnies twice here and has another two games in Calgary.

The regular-season champs play host to the best-of-three conference playoffs.

Barring a total collapse, a post-season berth is assured.

The difference between this team and last year's is simple: Experience. The return of Carol Turney-Loos, who has resumed her role as conference scoring leader, has provided stability and inspiration — not to mention an abundance of points.

Luanne Hebb, another national team-member, and 19-year-old Sandi Lewis, a rebounding whiz who played for Canadian senior champion Victoria Home Lumber last season, rounds out the Vikettes' inner core of strength.

In addition, Shields' neophytes of last season are rounding into form. Sophomore Tracy McAra, twice an all-star in Christmas tournaments, has developed into her coach's idea of one of the quickest guards in Canada.

HOOPLA — Vancouver Kirbys, a senior 'A' squad at McKinnon Gym Sunday at 2 p.m., represent perhaps the most serious threat to Vikettes' win streak. . .Viking guard Ian Hyde-Lay, the cast off his ankle, will dress tonight and may see action. . .At 12-0, Vikings are in the stratosphere of the men's division. But Lethbridge coach Ken Olynyk was Ken Shields' assistant last season and knows the UVic system. According to Calgary's Gary Howard, Pronghorns, who upset UVic once last year, are 45 per cent improved. . .Perry Mirkovich of Lethbridge leads CWUAA with a 23.5 scoring average.

Newnham back

The return of Jack Newnham to his old turf and the appearance of a Seattle entry will highlight the opening of the third annual Lansdowne Midget Boys' Basketball Tournament this weekend.

The five-team competition starts 4 p.m. today at Lansdowne Junior High School and continues with games starting at 9 a.m. Saturday.

Newnham coached for several years at Lansdowne and was largely responsible for making that school's basketball program one of the best in the province.

He moved to the Mainland last year and returns for the tournament as coach of North Surrey.

Visiting from Washington will be Richmond Highlands, current leaders of the North Seattle Midget League.

Joining Lansdowne on the Victoria side are Fairburn and Arbutus.

Owens opposed to Carter boycott proposal

PARADISE VALLEY, Ariz. (AP) — Jesse Owens, who won four gold medals in the 1936 Olympics in Germany, says he opposes President Carter's proposed U.S. boycott of the Moscow Games.

"To me, it's not right in the eyes of God or the soul of man," said Owens.

"Politics and world events should be kept out of the Olympics. It hurts to have a kid who has trained, believed, lived, slept and ate Olympics for years, and suddenly someone says you can't go."

Owens, 66, has been undergoing chemotherapy treatment for cancer of the left lung.

His comments on the Olympics — in an interview with Rick Lanning published Thursday in the the Phoenix Gazette — were his first on the subject.

Said Owens: "I still have a lot of things to do, but my first priority is to to get well. You pray, and you believe in yourself. Otherwise it's in the hands of God."

Because Owens was black, German leader Adolf Hitler refused to congratulate him after he took gold medals in the 100- and 200-metre dash, the long jump and the 400-metre relay race, smashing the Nazi dictator's dream of Aryan supremacy.

Owens operates Jesse Owens Public Relations in Phoenix, which has contracts with a half dozen major U.S. corporations to provide motivational impact for employees, concentrating on the sales staff.

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — A New York state judge ruled Thursday that an athlete from Taiwan must be allowed to carry the island nation's traditional red-and-blue flag at the opening Wednesday of the 1980 Winter Olympics.

In a decision handed down in nearby Plattsburgh, Justice Norman L. Harvey said the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee may not stop Liang Ren-Guey, a Nordic skier from Taiwan, from using the flag of the Republic of China.

In effect, the judge overruled the policy of the International Olympic Committee, which recently re-admitted the People's Republic of China into the Olympic family and told Taiwan that it would have to adopt a new flag and anthem. The IOC also said the Taiwan group would have to go by the name Chinese Taipei Olympic Committee.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers announced Thursday that the uniform number worn by Duke Snider — No. 4 — will be retired at the National League baseball team's annual oldtimers game Sunday, July 6.

Snider was elected to the Hall of Fame earlier this year and will be officially inducted in the Hall at Cooperstown, N.Y., on Aug. 3.

Snider's uniform number will be the sixth to be retired by the Dodgers. The others were Roy Campanella's No. 39; Sandy Koufax's No. 32; Jackie Robinson's No. 42; Walter Alston's No. 24, and Jim Gilliam's No. 19.

Snider is the Dodgers' all-time leader in home runs (389); runs-batted-in (1,271) and extra-base hits (814). He played with the Dodgers from 1947-62.

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada's top two runners in women's 800 metres will compete in the event at the Second Edmonton Journal International Indoor Games Feb. 16, it was announced Thursday.

Anne Mackie-Morelli of Richmond and Debbie Campbell of Victoria, ranked No. 1 and 2 in Canada respectively, have been competing against each other on a regular basis. Mackie-Morelli beat Campbell at last year's Journal Games.

The field also includes Brit McRoberts of Richmond, Ranza Clark of Calgary, Kathy Weston of Oregon and Maggie Keyes of California.

CALGARY (C ') — Calgary Stampeders of the Canadian Football Le gue have recorded an operating profit for the first time si ce 1972.

Club president Frank Finn said Thursday the addition of 7,750 seats to McMahon Stadium and the fine performance of the club during 1979 led to record profits from football operations of $140,612.

The club finished second in the Western Football Conference with a 12-4 record but was knocked out in the WFC final by the Grey Cup champion Edmonton Eskimos.

In addition to earnings on football operations, the club raised $250,905 last year from its annual fund-raising dinner and interest on a stability fund set aside for bad years, Finn told the annual meeting.

The club filled 89 per cent of its seats during 1979, drawing an average 30,085 spectators a game.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Jockey Club has raised the purses for its two most prestigious stakes races in 1980 at Exhibition Park.

The B.C. Derby and the Premier's Championship will both be $75,000-added affairs this year with gross purses in the range of $80,000.

California-bred Pole Position won both races in 1979 when they were $50,000-added events.

The Derby at 1 1-8 miles for three-year-olds is scheduled for Sept. 13 and the Premier's for three-year-olds and up is set for Oct. 4 over 1 38 miles.

The 114-day season begins April 14 aand concludes Oct. 18.

Parkland sniper holds slim lead

While their schools engage in a four-team dogfight for first place in the Greater Victoria senior boys' basketball league, John Ibbotson and Al Cole are fighting a private battle of their own.

Ibbotson, a holdover from Parkland Panthers' 1979 Island champion squad, and Cole of Belmont Braves, are one-two in the league scoring race.

Statistics released after of the first half show Ibbotson with 103 points, one more than Cole.

Ian Lang of Mount Douglas Rams is third with 95.

Marc Haas, Cole's teammate, leads players scoring 70 or more points with an impressive 57.8 field goal percentage (40 for 69). Haas, whose Braves are tied with Mount Douglas at eight points apiece, has 55 rebounds, also tops in the 'AA' league.

Second half play picks up today.

In senior girls' games Thursday, unbeaten Mount Douglas Ramblers solidified their hold on top of 'AA' division with a 76-43 victory over Spectrum.

Ramblers, now 11-0, got 28 points from Alison Snow while Juanita Hearn countered with 20 for Spectrum.

Elsewhere, Oak Bay earned its eighth win against three losses by dumping Stelly's 90-49. Sandy Smith scored 23 points and Sue Walton added 18 for the winners. Sandy Taylor scored 17 Stelly's points.

Cory Aspden scored 18 points as Esquimalt Dockers blitzed Belmont 60-37 and Gillian Poole contributed 18 points to Parkland's 58-40 triumph over Victoria High Tigers.

Sharon Walker scored 10 points as Reynolds squeaked out a 22-18 win over Lambrick Park.

Out of mouths of babes comes lightning bolt

INQUESTS ARE usually bleak affairs but occasionally a witness or even coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre himself comes up with something that brings a smile to the sombre proceedings.

Earlier this week St. Jorre was questioning an 11-year-old girl to determine if she knew the significance of swearing an oath.

She told him she did.

The coroner then asked her if she knew what would happen if she didn't tell the truth following an oath.

She knew that too, saying she could expect to be "struck by lightning".

Her answer, St. Jorre told the tittering courtroom, reminded him of a time when on the bench in juvenile court he asked another young witness the same question.

The young man's reply: "In B.C., sir, I'd be put on probation."

SHE LIVED up to her name as the Red Tory, did Flora MacDonald, external affairs minister in the defeated Clark government, when she visited Victoria this week.

Reporters' notebook

Flora wore a light maroon suit which set off her red hair rather well during campaign stops in Colwood and at University of Victoria Tuesday. Earlier, she won applause from supporters at a breakfast in Duncan when she told them "As a single person, it's most unusual for me to sit down with anybody else for breakfast."

ON HOLIDAY again is Hall Leiren, press secretary to Premier Bennett.

Hired last fall, Leiren soon took off on a cross-country tour to find out how press secretaries work. Shortly after that he took a week off, and now with the premier in Hawaii, he's off for a couple of weeks "to catch up with his overtime."

And we thought that's why a press secretary got $35,000 a year plus expenses but no pay for overtime.

But, as one press gallery wag put it, "don't knock it, it's what he does best."

IF YOU'RE a little concerned about L.J. Wallace coming back on active stream as super deputy minister in the premier's office, consider this:

Dr. Gordon Shrum has just been appointed to the board of directors of the controversial B.C. Buildings Corporation, the government operation in charge of all provincial buildings and future development in B.C.

Shrum is 84, which makes Wallace, in his mid-sixties, just a kid.

AND TALKING of senior citizens, William Henry Kemp Edmonds has just been appointed chairman of the corporate and financial services commission by Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister James Nielsen. Edmonds is 63.

Joining him on the commission will be Charles Frederick Long who is a tender 62.

Who said the kids were taking over?

DEPUTY FINANCE minister G. S. "Gerry" Bryson has one more major chore before he steps down as deputy minister of finance—steering the 1980-81 budget through the Legislature.

After that he makes way for Larry Bell in what is probably the most powerful slot in government.

Bryson has worked for three B.C. governments as deputy finance minister and served for 20 years on the federal-provincial committee on economic and financial matters, which recently awarded him a silver tray engraved with the coats of arms of all 10 provinces in appreciation of his contributions.

Which leaves us wondering what the government will do for the man who was respected by many, hated by some, feared by others, but was never seriously challenged on his figures.

Experts losers, shorter outfall gets support

By NANCY BROWN
Colonist reporter

The experts say it won't work, but the politicians say it's cheap and they will go ahead with a 3,500-foot, $4-million outfall at Clover Point.

Members of the Capital Region District's solid waste management committee decided Wednesday to recommend expenditures of up to $300,000 for consulting engineers CH2M Hill to design and supervise construction of a 3,560-foot outfall.

A PERMIT to build the outfall was granted by the Pollution Control Branch despite recommendations from Environment Canada that a 6,000-foot outfall, as originally designed, is necessary.

Enviornment Canada engineers said several parts of the study carried out by CH2M Hill in support of the outfall application were unacceptable or based on improperly applied data.

In a report to the pollution control branch, they said the study placed too much emphasis on economic considerations and had not shown technically that the short outfall would prevent shoreline contamination.

THE REGION was granted a permit to build the outfall "strictly on a trial basis," according to a letter from Harry Klassen, assistant director of the pollution control branch.

The permit was granted, he stressed, only to allow improvements to be made as quickly as possible at a reasonable cost.

"The report supporting your application prepared by your consultant CH2M is not the basis of our decision inasmuch as some of the assumptions made and conclusions reached therein are not supported by the studies on record.

"IN THIS regard I accept the analysis of branch engineering staff and that of Environment Canada," he said.

The region will have to guarantee that it is physically and technically feasible to construct an outfall to 6,000 feet or the permit will be suspended.

ENVIRONMENT Canada engineer F.G. Claggett, who reviewed the region's application, recommended that the original 6,000-foot plan be retained.

"The temptation to ignore field data and approve a shorter outfall based mostly on cost considerations should be avoided, since it will be difficult to prevent the same approach being taken by other municipalities," reported Claggett.

He said it would be difficult if not impossible to extend the outfall once installed, and the alternative of sewage treatment would be costly for both installation and operation and may not achieve its purpose.

CLAGGETT SAID the results of studies predict that swimming water regulations will not be met in the area around Clover Point during the "worst" conditions if the shortened outfall was allowed. "The question remains will swimming water regulations be met during the recreation season when they apply?

"The outfall recommended length is based on a cost benefit analysis, which in turn is based on a model which may be invalid as it predicts that the shoreline water quality will never be met no matter how long the outfall.

"Does this approach not set a dangerous precedent where treatment facilities are based on cost and not on receiving water objectives and regulations?

"THE REPORT addresses itself to the bacterial count at the shore but not to the occurrence of floatable solids on the foreshore, even though only trash screening and comminution (grinding) are required by permit," Claggett pointed out.

He pointed out that earlier dye and drogue studies have shown that the only way to ensure little or no movement of discharged sewage towards the shore is to extend the outfall to the 6,400 feet distance required by the original permit.

PCB engineer J.W.A. Donald noted that the Hill study does not show that discharge at the proposed location will not cause shoreline pollution, but he felt a permit could be granted on a trial basis.

"TO REQUIRE the expenditure of several millions of dollars which might not be absolutely necessary cannot be condoned," he said.

CH2M Hill engineer Steven Lackey said design work could be completed and ready for tender by June, the contract could be awarded in July, and the outfall installed during the summer for completion in October this year.

The 6,400-foot outfall originally scheduled for completion in the summer of 1975 was to have cost $1.9 million.

The CH2M Hill report estimates that a long outfall would cost about about $4½ million more than the shorter one.

LACKEY refused to estimate construction costs of the shortened outfall, but said analysis of available data indicated it could be between $3.5 million and $4 million.

At present sewage is being discharged about 200 feet from the tip of Clover Point, through a pipe that broke at a weld during construction. For two years the region, engineering consultants and contractor have been suing each other.

Studies to support the CRD's legal position were carried out by CH2M Hill.

ANNOUNCEMENT of a settlement is expected soon.

Meanwhile, Lackey said he will be investigating relative costs and stability of different kinds of pipe. The region, he noted, has bought the polyethelene pipe that was to have been used for the long outfall, but Victoria Ald. Bob Wright said he did not wish to discuss that matter.

Lackey said it may be necessary to use steel pipe for the new project.

Canadian 'abandoned' in embassy pullout

NELSON, B.C. (CP) — A Montreal man working for a firm which did business in Iran says he was abandoned by the Canadian government when it closed its embassy and smuggled six U.S. diplomats out of the country last month.

Doug Browning, who has been working in Iran since 1973 for the firm of Stadler Hurter, said in Tehran Thursday he is a "diplomatic hostage."

"I'm very angry," he said in a telephone interview with the Nelson Daily News. "I'm angry with the (Canadian) embassy. They phoned me a half hour before the embassy people left for the airport.

"The first week I nearly had a breakdown. I didn't know how they (the Iranians) would react to the embassy closing. Because I'm a little nobody and I'm not big publicity . . . I don't understand how they can leave me here stranded and take six Americans out."

Browning said he stayed behind in Iran when other company employees left late in 1979 after the Canadian government said it could no longer guarantee the safety of Canadians.

Browning was to organize the shipping of the other employees' personal goods back to Canada. The company had a $250 million contract with an Iranian government corporation to build sawmills, plywood plants, pulp mills and to do other forestry work near the Caspian sea.

Since that time, Browning said, he has not been given an exit visa, although he said his life is not in any danger.

"I'm not free to come home to Canada," he said. "I've been a hostage for six months, but a hostage with the freedom to travel around Iran."

Stadler Hurter went bankrupt after leaving Iran. The name and assets have been bought by a German firm which says it has been unable to get Browning out of the country.

Browning said he was in constant contact with the Canadian embassy for six months. Embassy officials were unable to persuade the Iranians to let him go, he said.

Browning said that although the firm went bankrupt, it did not inform Iranian officials, who continued to consider him a company representative and wanted him to remain. In addition, "there is a tax problem which is very involved."

He said that finally, the president of Iran's industrial development corporation "had written to police to say that he had no objection now to me leaving Iran."

"The morning I was picking up the letter was the morning the story broke in the local papers about what the Canadians—'the terrible Canadians,' as they say—did.

"I went to the office and they said 'We're sorry, but we have to withdraw that letter and from now on your're considered political.' Being political they

Ottawa boots another Soviet diplomat

Nobody hotter than Kotter at table

Comedian Gabe Kaplan, star of television's Welcome Back Kotter, pulls in $190,000 he won in three-day poker game during Amarillo Slim Poker Classic at Sahara-Reno hotel-casino in Reno, Nev. He beat 38 other contestants, each of whom posted $10,000 to get into the super-high-stakes game.

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is expelling another Soviet official in retaliation for the expulsion of Col. Harold Gold, a Canadian military attache, from Moscow, the external affairs department announced Thursday.

The department said in a statement the government has reduced the Soviet embassy's commercial section by one person. That means V.F. Trofimov, a member of that section, will be forced to leave in two weeks, the statement said.

Retaliation promised

This is the latest move in a series of expulsions beginning with the government's decision Jan. 21 to kick out three Soviet embassy officials for spying.

Moscow responded by ordering out Gold last week. Gold, who returned to Ottawa Wednesday, said Soviet charges he was spying are absurd.

External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald has been promising retaliation for some days.

The external affairs department said the expulsion of Trofimov "should not be construed as indicating that Mr. Trofimov was engaged in activities incompatible with his status in this country."

"The measures have been adopted solely in retaliation for the unwarranted expulsion of Col. Gold," the department said.

The statement said MacDonald warned the Soviet Union that Canada would retaliate if Russia expelled any Canadian diplomat for spying because Canadian diplomats in Moscow are not engaged in espionage.

Gold's activities "were fully in accord with his position as Canadian defence attache in Moscow."

"Therefore the Canadian government regards his expulsion as completely unjustified," the department said.

The latest move reduces the authorized number of Soviet diplomats in Canada to 63. The actual number of Soviet officials in this country is 60 because Moscow has not yet replaced the three military officers kicked out Jan. 21 for spying.

Canadian diplomats in Moscow now total 38.

The Conservative government has been lambasting the Soviet Union during the Feb. 18 election campaign, particularly since the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. But MacDonald declared Jan. 21 the decision to expel the three Soviet military officers for spying was not linked to the Afghanistan crisis.

Clark savors Trudeau oil slip

OTTAWA (CP) — Pierre Trudeau has stirred up more confusion about how much oil prices would rise under a Liberal government with a statement his aides wrote off Thursday as a slip of the tongue.

The Liberal leader said in a television interview Wednesday that the increase would be less than $3 a barrel if he is elected prime minister Feb. 18.

But aides travelling with Trudeau, after initially denying the statement, scrambled to listen to the tape and come up with an explanation.

"It was a slip," said Patrick Gossage, Trudeau's press spokesman in Prince George, B.C. "We haven't changed our position."

Gossage explained the slip this way:

The Conservatives have proposed a $4-a-barrel increase for domestic oil this year. But the price went up $1 on Jan. 1, leaving $3 to go.

That was the $3 to which Trudeau referred when he said an increase under a Liberal government would be less than $3 a barrel this year, said Gossage, saying the party is still committed to a total increase of less than $4 this year.

In Thunder Bay, Ont., Prime Minister Clark lashed out at the apparent confusion over the Liberals' statements on oil prices.

He told a campaign rally of about 500 that the Liberals had no less than four official spokesmen on energy matters. Each Liberal, he said, had a different figure for how much oil would increase this year.

"No wonder they can't explain their energy policies to Canadians," Clark said. "They can't explain it to themselves."

Trudeau, who has hedged on giving specific figures, made the statement after repeated demands to name a price during a CFTO-TV interview taped last week and broadcast Wednesday night.

Hopeful U.S. shelving Iran squeeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, encouraged by signs that Iran's new government is anxious to end the American hostage crisis, announced Thursday it would not formally impose long-promised economic sanctions against that country.

State department spokesman Hodding Carter explained the policy reversal by saying that the U.S. administration did not want to take this step while diplomatic activity continued.

He did not elaborate. However, reports have circulated in recent days indicating that Iran would be willing to release the 50 American hostages held by Moslem militants at the U.S. embassy in Tehran in exchange for the establishment of a UN-sponsored international tribunal to investigate alleged crimes of the deposed shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Carter to urge listing women on draft rolls

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will call for the registration of women for the military draft, White House officials said Thursday.

The White House scheduled an announcement for today detailing the president's plans for the entire draft registration program.

Officials who asked not to be identified said Carter decided to include women in the program despite a warning from Speaker Thomas O'Neill of the House of Representatives that the measure would not pass the Congress.

The president probably will limit registration to persons 19 and 20.

Carter announced plans last month in his State of the Union messsage to resume draft registration, citing an increasing military threat from the Soviet Union.

Although he has been silent on the question of whether he would include women, he had previously taken the position that any such program should include women.

There are about 150,000 women in the American military, out of a force of more than two million. However, women are banned by law from combat.

Japanese curb trade credits for Russians

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan decided Thursday to stop giving new trade credits to the Soviet Union in retaliation for the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, government sources said.

Financial sources estimated that the move means a freeze of about $1.4 billion in government credits originally earmarked for two-way trade and Soviet development projects.

The decision came after a meeting Thursday between Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira and senior officials of the foreign, international trade and industry and finance ministries, government officials said.

"It can't be helped if the measure will affect Japanese-Soviet trade," a senior Foreign Ministry official told reporters.

Most of the two-way trade between Japan and the Soviet Union is financed by credits extended by the government's Export-Import Bank.

Foreign ministry sources said Foreign Minister Saburo Okita will brief U.S. ambassador Mike Mansfield today.

The government has also decided to boycott the Moscow Olympic games as a means to "express displeasure" over the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

More rioting rips Oakalla

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 120 prisoners smashed windows, furniture and water pipes overnight in a demonstration in the west wing of Oakalla prison in Burnaby.

Prison security official Lloyd Linn said the prisoners returned to their cells Thursday morning after meeting with a Vancouver lawyer.

Linn said the prisoners were upset about disciplinary measures and lack of leisure time. He said it is not known if charges will be laid against the prisoners.

Linn said several prisoners were cut by glass when windows were broken.

Armed guards stood watch outside the minimum-security institution during the disturbance. The disturbance was similar to one that ended Wednesday when guards turned a fire hose on 28 prisoners who had wrecked furniture in the south wing.

Barry Sadler, of the B.C. Corrections Service, said the prison administration had agreed to bolster the prison's legal library, to provide more flexibility in recreation and to loosen clothing regulations.

He said warden Henry Bjarnson had agreed to give more consideration to allowing an independent presence on the prison's internal discipline board that punishes infractions by prisoners.

"The only major issue of contention left is the visiting situation," Sadler said. "As I understand it, the inmates feel there should be less security and supervision during visits."

Poll nudges queen to abdicate

LONDON (Reuter) — Most Britons believe Queen Elizabeth should abdicate within the decade and allow Prince Charles to become king, an opinion poll published Thursday says.

Seven out of every 10 people asked by the newsmagazine Now said the queen eventually should stand down. Many were in favor of her abdicating in 1986 when she will be aged 60.

Only one person in 10 believed the queen, crowned in 1953, should abdicate immediately.

Five months ago, a national poll showed that 40 per cent of the population believed the queen should give up her throne.

The change in public opinion is apparently due to the growing popularity of 31-year-old Prince Charles. He was the most popular member of the royal family with 70 per cent of the votes.

The poll showed that most Britons are fiercely loyal to the monarch.

Swiss charge UBC professor

VANCOUVER (CP) — University of British Columbia professor Cyril Belshaw has been charged in Switzerland with the murder of his wife, Vancouver lawyer Harry McLaughlin said Thursday.

McLaughlin said his client also was charged with fraud.

The well-known anthropology professor was extradited by French authorities to Switzerland late last week. McLaughlin said under Swiss law an extradited person must be charged formally or be released.

Betty Belshaw's nude, decomposed body was found wrapped in plastic bags beside a road in Switzerland last March.

The couple had been living in Switzerland when Mrs. Belshaw, 59, disappeared in early February.

McLaughlin said the investigation into the death was continuing. The process is different from Canada where the crown normally would complete its investigation before laying charges.

Under Swiss law, the chief examining magistrate is required to report to a Swiss tribunal every two weeks to justify keeping Belshaw in jail.

Belshaw has been under arrest in France since November when Paris police stopped him as he stepped off plane to attend an academic conference.

Belshaw is a former chairman of the UBC anthropology department and editor-in-chief of Current Arthropology, an international journal.
